Her Majesty Visions New Pinnacle of Womanhood At Brilliant Ceremony

By THOMAS WAYLING
Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin.

OTTAWA, May 20—A Queen to all the world—a woman to herself, Her Majesty the Queen today placed womanhood on a new pinnacle when, in laying the corner stone of the Supreme Court of Canada, she said, "Perhaps it is not inappropriate that this task should be performed by a woman. For woman's position in civil society has depended on the growth of law."

It was not the inscription carved in English and French on the foundation stone she so "well and truly laid," but it ought to be carved under the figure of Justice—who also is a woman.

King's weather shone in Ottawa today, and the scene on Parliament Hill was brilliant. Before the trooping of the color, the Queen appeared at a window in the Governor-General's office. And the crowds swarmed over to the East block and cheered and cheered.

As a speechmaker Her Majesty speaks with a clarity and purity which might well become a standard. Now and then she looked up smiling from her notes. Were she not the Queen she could be elected to parliament in any of a thousand constituencies.

It was fitting that the minister of justice, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, followed Her Majesty's speech, for he put grace and fire and eloquence

Monarch Sees Time-Honored Trooping Color

By W. W. MURRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, May 20. — In celebration of the King's 44th birthday, two regiments of Canadian Guards today performed the time-honored ceremony of trooping the color.

But differentiating the picturesque and traditional pageant from that of other years, the ceremony on Parliament Hill was carried out in the presence of His Majesty himself. Queen Elexabeth watched it from a window of the Governor-General's chambers in the east block, 50 feet away.

Attending the trooping of the color at the Horse Guards Parade in London, the King ordinarily is mounted and rides from Buckingham Palace. He drove in a royal motor car from Rideau Hall to Parliament Hill today, accompanied by a mounted escort of Royal Canadian Dragoons. He arrived at 10:30 a.m. E.D.T.

ATTRACTIVE SPECTACLE

The spacious lawn in front of the Parliament Buildings presented an attractive spectacle. Its entire area had sprouted slender white flagstaffs from which streamed flags

YANKEE CLIPPER STARTS REGULAR OCEAN FLIGHT

NEW YORK, May 20—The Yankee Clipper, carrying 100,000 letters, took off from Port Washington, Long Island at 1.07 p.m. E.D.T. (10.07 a.m. M.S.T.) today, inaugurating regular transport service between the United States and Europe. Arthur La Porte, skipper of the plane which carried a crew of 14 and two company officials, said just before the take-off that the flight "is pretty much of a routine thing."

He said he expects to reach Horta, The Azores, in about 14 hours.

There will be four other mail flights before passenger service is started. The ship, a 42-ton flying boat, can carry a maximum of 35 passengers.

DUCE SHOUTS DEFIANCE TO DEMOCRACIES

CUNEO, Italy, May 20.—Premier Mussolini, addressing a cheering mass meeting close to the French frontier, tonight declared the Italian-German military alliance would give Europe a bloc of 150,000,000 men "against which it will be impossible to do anything."

"This bloc, formidable in men and arms, wants peace," he declared, "and is ready to impose itself on the great democracies should they attempt to stop our irresistible march."

The mention of "the great democracies" brought prolonged boos from the crowd.

There were cries of "Tunisia!" "Nice!" "Savoy!" (All belong now to France) and "We will march!"

R.A.F. Puts On Great Show For Empire Air Day

LONDON, May 20. — The Royal Air Force proudly put on a display for Empire Air Day today with 5-000 planes in the growing British air fleet.

Flying officials showed a Spitfire fighter which makes 362 miles an hour, a Whitley heavy bomber capable of 245 miles, and new, light two-engined bombers.

OTTAWA, May 20—Today the King and Queen entered the House of Commons for the second time since their arrival in Ottawa, entering by the Senate door after the trooping of the color. The King and his escort arrived first, the King in the full dress uniform of the Welsh Guards and his escorts in morning suits.

As he entered, the King passed a cheering group of about 40 spectators standing at the corridor waiting to catch a glimpse of him. He walked past slowly, smiling and nodding as he went direct to the speaker's spacious rooms where he changed into morning clothes.

QUEEN APPEARED

Directly he was out of sight, the Queen appeared on the steps, and as she ascended another cheer went up from the little crowd. Her magnetic charm held all spellbound, as she walked by within three feet and smiled with that smile that has made her thrill the hearts of every citizen who has caught a glimpse of her.

She had on a beautiful light mauve silk coat dress. The coat was knee length and simply fashioned. She wore an off-the-face hat of the same color with the high front sloping back on her shapely head. Her feet were adorn-

Toronto Set To Welcome King, Queen

By SIDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, May 20.—A city gay in spirit anticipating the visit of the King and Queen, Toronto bulged to its confines today as thousands poured from train, bus and automobile to await Monday's spectacle of pageantry in the provincial capital.

As if all roads and railway lines in Ontario had only one ending, in Toronto, the visitors came from all parts of the province and neighboring sections of the United States. Before the King and Queen have departed Monday evening, Toronto's normal population of 800,000 is expected to have been more than doubled.

CITY DECORATED

The city, bedecked in flags and bunting, was just about ready. Hotels, rooming houses and private homes opening a spare room or two for the week-end, were being filled rapidly.

Nearly 30 special trains will bring the thousands to the city. Western Ontario will have a chance to see the King and Queen in its own districts next month, but still special trains are coming from Kitchener, Woodstock, London and other places. One boatload of 500 is coming from Rochester, N.Y.

From eastern and north-central

KING, QUEEN HAVE LUNCH WITH PREMIER

OTTAWA, May 20.—Following a morning crowded with ceremony and display in which they paraded before probably 200,000 of their subjects in Ontario and Quebec, Their Majesties retired for private luncheon in the quiet atmosphere of Laurier House, home of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The prime minister had only three guests to meet the royal couple. These were his sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay of Barrie, Ont., acting as official hostess, for her bachelor brother; Rev. Alexander Ferguson, minister of St. Andrew's church which the prime minister attends, and Mrs. Ferguson.

Two members of the royal staff, Lord Airlie and Lady Nunburnholme, also were at the luncheon.

Following the luncheon the Misses Jean and Rosabel Lay, nieces of the prime minister, were presented to Their Majesties. They are guests with their mother at Laurier House but did not attend the luncheon.

Mickey Macdonald Will Hang: Young Brother Acquitted

TORONTO, May 20. — Mickey Macdonald, 21, was convicted today of the murder of Bookie James Windsor and his 19-year-old brother, Alex, was acquitted by a supreme court jury which deliberated a little more than two hours.

Mickey was sentenced to be hanged July 20.

"I've been framed by the Toronto police department," the older brother shouted in the direction of the jury when Mr. Justice G. F. McFarland asked him if he had anything to say before sentence was passed.

Proposal To Scrap Balkan Entente

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 20. —A proposal to scrap the Balkan Entente's military and political obligations in favor of a loose federation will be discussed by Yugoslav and Rumanian foreign ministers on Sunday, a high authority said today.

The proposal was advanced by Yugoslavia to replace the close union of Turkey, Greece, Rumania and Yugoslavia with a group that would also include Bulgaria.

7 WAR VETS FREED FROM ONTARIO JAIL

TORONTO, May 20—Seven Great War veterans, at present serving sentences in Ontario jails have been released. Clemency was granted all war veteran prisoners who could qualify in honor of the visit of the King and Queen.

HEAVY RAINS HELP BATTLE FOREST FIRES

Heavy rains continued to alleviate the forest fire situation throughout Alberta and with the general nature of the downfall, heavier in the northern part of the province than the south, the situation was reported much easier Saturday.

Along the Athabasca valley, where the hazard has been greatest, the situation has greatly improved and while the conditions over most of the province are now almost at the "satisfactory" point, it is pointed out that the hazard is not entirely removed and the utmost caution is still urged.

NAZI PLOT TO ASSASSINATE EDUARD BENES

PARIS, May 20 — Diplomatic sources here said today Stefan Osusky, former Czecho - Slovak minister to France, had forwarded to Eduard Benes, former president of Czecho-Slovakia information of a Nazi plot to assassinate Benes during his current residence in the United States.

Benes, who resigned as Czecho-Slovakia's president after the September partitioning of that now vanished republic at Munich, is lecturing in the United States.

Osusky was said to have turned over all his information to French and American police authorities.

100,000 Visitors From North Alberta Will See Royalty

With the visit of Their Majesties to Edmonton on June 2 less than two weeks away, approximately 100,000 loyal citizens from northern Alberta villages, towns and cities, were preparing today for their impending trip to Edmonton to see the King and Queen.

For several weeks organized Royal Visit committees have been busy reserving large blocks of seats in the bleachers being built along the procession route here. And while excited Edmontonians rushed plans to cope with the great influx of visitors, other Northern Alberta residents were working on 24-hour shifts as they strove to complete arrangements that would ensure safe transportation to the capital for the vast multitude.

Majority of the outsiders plan to arrive in Edmonton early on the morning of the visit of Their Majesties and to leave the same evening. Following are some of the arrangements made by Royal Visit committees in central and northern Alberta centres, compiled from reports received from The Bulletin's correspondents:

LACOMBE

Arrangements for a special train to carry Lacombe and district citizens to Edmonton to see the King and Queen on June 2 have been completed and it is estimated that 1,400 children and adults will make the trip either by the special train, busses or in private cars. Of this number about 600 will be school children, who will be in charge of

NAZI MINISTER SAYS WEAPONS BEST ANSWER

BERLIN, May 20—Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels says "there is no better argument than weapons" in the face of Prime Minister Chamberlain's proposal of a long-range peace policy.

The sharp-tongued propaganda minister spoke last night to a Nazi gathering in Cologne.

"We do not believe that in the decisive hour Democracy is longer-winded than we are," Goebbels said. "It is weak in the chest."

In his address, Goebbels spoke of the German army as "the strongest military power in the world," and said: "A march to Berlin (by an enemy) today belongs to the realm of fancy."

Police Up-To-Date

CALGARY, May 20.—For the first time in Calgary's history radio-equipped motorcycles were used by the police force Friday. They will be used here during the Royal Visit next Friday.

ICEBERGS, FOG CONSTITUTED REAL DANGER

WINDSOR, Ont., May 20—Icebergs and fog encountered by the Empress of Australia, while bringing the King and Queen to Canada constituted a real danger, in the opinion of Cyril Abbott, sailor of H.M.S. Southampton, member of the royal convoy. Abbott is visiting his parents' home in Windsor.

"I've been 14 years in the navy and I never saw such fog, or so many icebergs, before," he said.

Canada Celebrates King's Birthday

OTTAWA, May 20.—Canada celebrated the King's birthday today. His Majesty was born Dec. 14, 1895, but by proclamation today is set aside for observance of the birthday in Canada.

Their Majesties, in their Canadian capital, carried on with the festival of pageantry and ceremony inspired by Canada's first welcoming of her rulers.

KING HATLESS ON JOURNEY THROUGH HULL

HULL, Que., May 20—The King was hatless today as he and Queen Elizabeth drove through Hull, French-Canadian city neighboring the capital, in a royal motor car with the top down.

The procession probably was the most informal to date of the Canadian tour. No bands or troops accompanied the royal party.

It was a holiday in Hull and shouts of "Vive Le Roi" and "Vive La Reine" echoed through the streets even before the Royal procession arrived.

TROOPER LOSES DIGNITY WHEN CHARGER SHIES

OTTAWA, May 20.—A trooper of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards' mounted escort but every shred of dignity by tumbling ignominously from his horse here Friday immediately behind the state carriage bearing Their Majesties triumphantly through lanes of cheering citizens.

Pensioned lance erect, chin up, plume on his brass helmet waving gracefully, the Dragoon trotted smartly behind the Royal carriage along the Rideau canal.

A siren on a boat in the canal frightened his horse. The horse shied. Down went the Dragoon.

Calgary Liberals To Co-Operate In Anti Social Credit

CALGARY, May 20—Calgary Liberals will co-operate with other political parties in the city to oppose Social Credit and secure "businesslike" government at the next provincial election.

This decision was announced following a meeting of the management committee of the Calgary Liberal association Friday night.

The meeting appointed a committee, J. M. Dillon, constituency president; James A. Pogue, constituency secretary; and L. Fred Mayhood, executive member, to negotiate with accredited members of other parties for such co-operation.

GERMANS IGNORE KING, QUEEN VISIT TO THIS DOMINION

BERLIN, May 20. — The German press has almost wholly ignored the visit to Canada of the King and Queen.

Most papers mentioned the trip in brief items on the fourth or fifth page, asserting the delay caused by bad weather in the north Atlantic spoiled the effect of the Royal Visit. They emphasized the consequent shortness of the royal guests' stay in Ottawa.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung reprinted without comment a foreign press report that the King and Queen had been greeted in Montreal by "an enormous crowd estimated at 1,000,000 persons, of whom about 300,000 came from the United States."

Other papers spoke ironically of "Indians in traditional costume" who greeted Their Majesties, asserting that these Indians were not sons of the wilderness, but employees of Montreal steel works who had never before in their lives worn the dress of their ancestors.

SHANGHAI CITY AT NORMALCY IN NEW ORDER

Barbed Wire Barricades Down—Foreign Troops In Barracks

SHANGHAI, May 20.—Shanghai returned to normal today when barbed wire barricades were withdrawn from down-town streets and foreign troops returned to their barracks after assisting municipal police in a 24-hour "law and order" demonstration.

On the central China war front Chinese and Japanese issue conflicting claims of a major victory in northern Hupeh province. Chinese reports said a large Chinese force averted a Japanese attempt to encircle them and fell upon the invaders' left wing in a surprise attack, killing at least 10,000. Japanese asserted large-scale Chinese resistance in the North Hupeh area virtually had collapsed following the rout of 26 divisions.

regions of the province, and from the neighboring villages and towns, the greatest influx will come. Special train loads of school children from Grey and Bruce counties will leave Owen Sound early Monday morning for the 120-mile trip. Trucks have been donated to bring children of families on relief at Owen Sound, one of the centres in Georgian Bay district to declare a holiday Monday.

More than 1,500 are expected in two trains from Belleville; 1,200 will come from Peterborough and from Hamilton, where the King and Queen will visit June 7, nearly 10,000 are expected.

Children will be taken directly to Exhibition and Riverdale parks where they will gather with students from the city and its suburbs on special vantage points. About 50,000 of them will mass in the natural amphitheatre that is the eastern part of Riverdale park. Their Majesties' automobile will pass within 15 feet of the children, over a mile-long stretch. Another 50,000 will assemble along the waterfront in Exhibition Park.

There will be vast numbers everywhere the royal procession will pass. Stands have been built to accommodate 40,000 who will pay from $2 to $5 for an unobstructed view. More than 100,000 are expected in Woodbine Park when the King and Queen watch the running of the King's Plate.

Five Men in One—King George VI Is Much-Uniformed Monarch

The World Wishes Him Many Happy Returns — He Is 44 Today

Man of many titles and uniforms is George VI, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India. Pictures above show him in five of his costumes. Left to right, as admiral of the fleet, in formal attire, in morning clothes, as field marshal of the army, and as an officer of the Cameron Highlanders. The king probably will wear these and other uniforms on his visit. Today is the official birthday of the King. He is 44 years old today.

Time Honored Ceremony Held Trooping Color

and heraldic bearings. The Royal Cypher fluttered in a pleasing harmony of color amid blues and golds and reds.

Although Canada celebrated the King's 44th birthday today his actual birthdate is Dec. 14. On his accession to the throne he decided to have it formally celebrated June 9. For this year, however, the date was changed to May 20 so it could be celebrated while he is in Ottawa.

The brigade of Canadian Guards, formed by the Governor-General's Footguards, Ottawa, and the Canadian Grenadier Guards, Montreal, were the regiments employed today. The entire brigade was commanded by Col. F. R. Phelan, Montreal, with Lieut-Col. W. G. Wurtele, Ottawa, and Lieut-Col. Gilbert S. Stairs, Montreal, leading their particular regiments.

Major of the parade was Major M. F. Feller, C.G.G., with Capt. R. K. C. Jepson, G.G.F.G., adjutant in brigade waiting. The G.G.F.G., provided the escort for the Colors, No. 1 guard being commanded by Major E. Lisle.

Since yesterday Ottawa's loyal fervor has continued to heighten. Gaily decorated streets from Rideau Hall to the centre of the city were jammed with visitors early today as the royal processional route had stretched for approximately eight miles. Today it was six to less than one-third of that and the crowds concentrating on the capital city had been extensively reinforced.

Movement along the thoroughfares in the civic centre was difficult but amid all the jostling and crush there was the spirit of greatest good humor.

The royal box was immediately inside the centre gate of Parliament Hill, with the saluting base a few steps in advance of that. From their barracks at Lawaudowne Park the brigade of Guards marched, conveyed by street-car to the junction of Bank and Wellington streets, arriving there at 9:15 a.m., E.D.T. From there the troops marched on to Parliament Hill, where they were given a final going-over. Drawn up in column of guards, they presented a brave show. Clad in their scarlet tunics with gold facings and dark blue trousers down which was the familiar broad red stripe of the Guards regiment, and the whole color scheme triumphantly topped with towering bearskin cops, the soldiers drew applause from the crowds.

EIGHT GUARDS FORMED

Eight guards were formed, four from each regiment, and the evolutions were begun prior to the arrival of the King. First the officers "fell out," then the warrant and non-commissioned officers in charge of the eight guards marched to the saluting base. The fourth detail was performed by the officers taking position in front of their guards, while the drums played "Assembly." In slow time officers and warrant officers marched to their guard.

Meanwhile the Queen had arrived. Her Majesty, accompanied by Lady Tweedsmuir, had driven to Parliament Hill and at the entrance to the east block they were met by Lord Tweedsmuir, who escorted them to his chambers.

The King left Rideau Hall with Major General T. V. Anderson, chief of the general staff, at 10:15 a.m., with a mounted escort of the Royal Canadian Dragoons. He wore a colonel's uniform of the Grenadier Guards.

NATIONAL ANTHEM

Arriving in front of the centre gate, the dragoons drew up in line on the south side of the street, facing the parliament buildings. The King alighted and moved forward to the royal box. His entry was greeted by the playing of the national anthem, while the guards, converting themselves into two regiments, each under its own commander, presented arms.

Reverting to the original status of eight guards, the troops stood at attention while the King approached. Walking along the line he inspected them while the massed bands played "Land of Hope and Glory."

The King returned to the royal box, and the troop began.

The band and drums played a slow march from the right to the left of the line. Counter marching, they broke into quick-step, back to their original position.

The escort for the color then moved out and halted opposite the color. As it was taken over by the ensign, the band played "God Save the King." In slow time the color was trooped down the line of guards, the bands playing "Les Huguenots." Again, to the tune of "The Maple Leaf" the color, accompanied by its escorting guard, was trooped in quick time, and finally came to rest near the right of the line.

This ceremonial detail occupied ing at attention all the while. When it terminated, the regiments were formed into column of guards and marched past the King in slow time, forming a circuit of the parade ground, the troops broke into quick time and again marched past the saluting base.

The final movement was the drawing up of the guards in line and their advance toward the saluting base in review order. The massed bands played "God Save the King."

V.C.'s RECEIVED

Rounding off a brilliant spectacle, the King, returning to the royal box, received the three Ottawa residents who wear the Victoria Cross. First among them was Lieut-General Sir Richard E. W. Turner, whose honor dates from the Boer War. Next came Major Milton F. Gregg, sergeant at arms of the House of Commons, who won his Victoria Cross in France in 1918, and, third Pte. P. Konowal, a member of the House of Commons staff, who received the V.C. at Lens, in 1917.

This concluded the ceremony of the trooping of the color. The King, accompanied by his suite, proceeded from the royal box to the parliament buildings for a brief rest in the chambers of the speaker of the Senate, prior to joining Her Majesty for the ceremony of laying the corner stone of the new supreme court building.

Just such a blaze of color as Ottawa saw today probably enlivened the lists in the old days when armored knights trumpeted their challenges. And this analogy had a well defined relationship to the trooping of the color today, for tradition has it that the origins of the ceremony extend back to those medieval times.

Buckled in his armor, a knight in battle looked pretty much like any other knight similarly harnessed. The only way in which his men-at-arms could distinguish him was to keep their eyes on his heraldic bearings, emblazoned on shield, surcoat and pennon.

Throughout the centuries the trooping of the color has acquired other features, many associated with guard-mounting. These have become hallowed by tradition, although one at least had a somewhat ignoble start.

The "slow march," which now is the ceremonial step of the British army, was initiated by the Duke of Cumberland, of Culloden fame, as a test of the steadiness of a guard. His Royal Highness sought to establish that a body of troops who could perform that feat of balancing would be safe to be entrusted with the guardianship of the camp. The "slow march" figures largely in the color ceremony.

B. S. Cameron, chairman of the Lacombe and district Royal Visit committee, will head the delegation to the capital city and will be accompanied by members of his committee and members of the various civic bodies. Reservations have been made for a block of 1,600 seats on Portage Avenue to allow all citizens in the district a chance to get bleacher seat accommodation. The majority of the Lacombe visitors will return to their homes the same evening. The Spruceville Band will accompany the Lacombe party.

SYLVAN LAKE

Thousands of citizens of Sylvan Lake and district will see the King and Queen, with some scheduled to go to Calgary and others planning to visit Edmonton to catch a glimpse of the Royal couple. Sylvan Lake is already ablaze with lights, flags and bunting in honor of the Royal Visit to Alberta.

The greater number of Sylvan Lake citizens will travel to Edmonton to see the King and Queen and the resort will be practically deserted on June 2. A group of 30 Scouts will make the trip under Glen Paul, while a second group consisting of 180 school children will make the trip by train. The majority of the visitors will arrive in Edmonton by private cars.

STONY PLAIN

Stony Plain citizens will come to Edmonton 1,400 strong to greet Their Majesties on June 2, 900 of the number being school children. From the Stony Plain school division, which extends as far west as the Pembina river, a grand total of almost 1,700 students are expected to attend, according to school officials.

Walter Sharpin, secretary of the Stony Plain school division, and members of the school board are in charge of arrangements. A special train will carry a large number of the visitors to Edmonton, with many going by truck and car. Seats have been reserved on Portage avenue for the students.

HARDISTY

About 200 persons will gather in Edmonton from Hardisty, according to information received from that centre. About one-half of this number will be school children. The greater part of this number will travel by a special train that leaves Hardisty at 8.30 a.m. on June 2, arriving in Edmonton about noon.

WESTLOCK

Well over 1,000 persons will journey from Westlock to greet Their Majesties, with 700 school children expected to be included in the number. Cars and trucks will carry the greater number of the visitors, most of whom will remain in Edmonton for only one day. Westlock Boy Scouts and Cubs will take part in the parade of the provincial scouts. Seating accommodation has been reserved. G. B. Pierce, secretary of the Pembina school division, is in charge of arrangements.

TOFIELD

Six hundred Tofield citizens, including 325 school children, will swell the ranks of those greeting the King and Queen in Edmonton, according to reports received here. About two-thirds of the visitors will travel by car and truck. W. J. Chapman, town clerk, is handling the arrangements for Tofield.

WETASKIWIN

A large delegation is expected in the city from Wetaskiwin but to date no definite arrangements have been made. Seats have been reserved along both Whyte avenue and Portage avenue.

About 1,000 persons in Trochu and district are expected to see the King and Queen during their visit to Alberta, but about 900 of these intend visiting Calgary. Those coming to Edmonton are expected to travel by car. Two special trains will carry the greater number of the Calgary contingent to the southern city.

LLOYDMINSTER

About 30 school children had applied for reserved seats on the parade route in Edmonton on June 2 through the Royal Visit committee at Lloydminster Saturday, according to reports received in Edmonton, while a large number of family parties are being made up to journey to Edmonton. The greater part of the citizens will travel by car.

Fifteen members of the first Lloydminster Scout troop will travel to Edmonton and 12 members of the Old Colony troop are also expected to make the trip. Many of them will take part in forming a cordon along the route of the Royal procession.

In an effort to aid all school children in the district to see the King and Queen, the rural municipalities of Britannia and Wilton are granting 68 cents per student to aid in the cost of transporting students to see the Royal Couple to Alberta.

The majority will go the Unity, while several are expected to visit Edmonton.

SEVERAL PRESENTED

In the Senate hall the Speaker of the Senate, the Hon. Walter E. Foster, Major Claire Moyer, clerk of the senate and Major Drew Thompson, Usher of the Black Rod in the Senate Chamber, were presented to Her Majesty. She then proceeded to the speaker's chambers to await The King, followed by her lady in waiting, who was dressed in blue velvet and carried a silver fox. Along with her were the other members of her staff.

After fifteen minutes interval, the King appeared in full morning dress followed by the Queen. They again walked very slowly past, their radiant smiles winning all hearts.

The escort followed them out and as they walked down the aisles of the commons to enter the Senate chamber, many were the "oh's" of the spectators.

PAGES THRILLED

More thrilled probably than any of the other spectators to the historic scene were the little commons pages who were lined up in front of the clerk's door waiting with suppressed excitement for the arrival of Their Majesties. When they finally came near enough to see them, the little lads cheered and waved. The Queen looked at them and smiled sweetly. Then she touched The King's hand. He looked down at her and she nodded for him to look to her side of the aisle. He did and his boyish grin touched the little boys' hearts. No doubt as they saw the little boys, they were reminded of their own children, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose back home and gave the boys a smile that they will never forget. One of the lads after said to me, just as any little boy would do, "Gee, is she beautiful? Oh, boy."

Again The Queen had stolen the show.

His Majesty Thanks House of Commons For Their Benevolence

By THOMAS WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

OTTAWA, May 20.—The King on Friday for the first time in Canadian history "thanked the Commons for their benevolence" and assented to the bill which makes parliament supreme in all British nations. It was the money bill—the supply granted to His Majesty for the public services. This bill is the power of parliament, and as it is a Commons bill, it vests in the elected representatives of the people the might that upholds it.

His Majesty gave the Royal assent to a number of bills which had passed The Commons and The Senate, but the bill granting supply to His Majesty was an act apart. It was announced, not by the Speaker of the Senate, as were all other bills, but by the Speaker of the Commons. Never before in Britain's long history or that of her self-governing dominions has His Majesty in person "thanked the Commons for their benevolence." Always it has been by commission. By accepting and by giving his royal assent to the bill the King acknowledged the supremacy of the Commons and of Parliament.

It may be a quaint conceit, but the King accepted the benevolence for Canada's own public service. There was no bill granting monies for the King's own purse. The British taxpayer pays that bill.

ANOTHER PRECEDENT

The King also established another precedent. He delivered his speech from the throne in French as well as English, the first time there has been a British throne speech by a British King in that language. If the King had not endeared himself to the French-Canadians before, he has done so now.

In fact, the French-Canadians claim that "Le Roi du Canada" speaks better French than he does English, but that is their pride of language. His Majesty took five minutes to deliver his throne speech in English, seven minutes in French.

There was an uncomfortable wait while the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod went to the commons to call the members, and such waits are not good for His Majesty's nerves. It was noticeable as he first began to deliver the speech but his words came more smoothly as he went on.

The senate chamber was a deep pool of silence as he started to speak. The commons had entered quietly and with decorum, contrary to their usual custom of chattering as they came down the corridor from the green chamber to the red. There were more morning coats and gray ties in the commons than ever known before. The wives and unmarried daughters of senators and commoners were out in their very best and the chamber irradiated with light and color.

As the commons entered Hon. G. Howard Ferguson leaned out and exchanged a word with Hon. Ernest Lapointe, who came in with the commoners.

SIR WILLIAM BEAMED

The venerable Sir Wm. Mulock, wrose privy councillorship dates back to Laurier and 1896, was present, beamed over his beard and recalling his 94 years which included so many of public life.

Another veteran privy councillor was Sir Lyman Duff, who led his scarlet and ermine justices of the Supreme court to the woolsack before the throne. The woolsack in the house of lords is occupied by the lord chancellor, but in Canada the Supreme court has annexed the wool sack and the seven justices sit on the enormous circular cushion directly in front of the throne and Their Majesties had to move to the right of it to pass to the throne.

There were two thrones in the Red Chamber, side by side on the dais. The wife of the Governor General does not receive such honor, for her throne must be a step lower than that of the Governor General unless she be of the blood royal, in which case it is on the same level. Her Majesty occupied the tall carven high backed chair originally occupied by the Marchioness of Lorne. As the Princess Louise was the daughter of Queen Victoria and of the blood royal she was entitled to sit on the dais, and her throne was later consigned to the Archives of Canada. Lady Willingdon brought it out and restored it to the Red Chamber and used it during her regime, but always a step lower than the Governor General.

It was Princess Louise for whom Queen Victoria waived the old blood royal marriage dictum of the Georges, she permitted the Princess to marry the Marquis of Lorne who was not of the blood royal. By a strange quirk of fate the princess chair was Friday occupied by a Queen who was not of the blood royal but a commoner married by a royal prince.

Another departure in Friday's ceremony from the usual "Royal Assent" in the Canadian commons was the intimation "Pray be seated" after the King and Queen had taken their place on the throne.

NEW NOTE ADDED

The Queen, who has been giving the word "gracious" a new meaning, also added a new note. The wife of the Governor-General, entering with her consort, walks with eyes front and full of dignity. Her Majesty waved away such severe formality. As she entered with her hand in that of the King she smiled and bowed slightly to right and left and that smile made every heart miss a beat. There was the thin double line of black-clad senators to right and left (even the two women senators wore black), and behind row after row of beautifully-dressed wives and daughters. Every one of them felt the Queen's smile was directed to her and the Red Chamber glowed with pride.

Again when Their Majesties left the chamber the Queen unbent. She smiled and bowed right and left. The King did so also but it was a tiny bow compared with the graceful inclination of the Queen.

As they passed into the entrance hall of the senate, there before them was a life size portrait of Queen Victoria as a young queen.

Queen Elizabeth looked as though she had just stepped from the same frame with her lovely old world dress. In Queen Victoria's portrait one tiny foot shows beneath the long robe. "Her feet beneath her petticoat like little mice," sort of thing. So it was with Queen Elizabeth.

Queen Elizabeth had all of young Victoria's loveliness, but never since she has set foot in Canada has she shown that she feels her importance. Queen Victoria never let anyone forget that Queen Elizabeth never lets anyone think of it.

KING HANDSOME

The King looked handsome in his uniform of a British field marshal but there was a gravity which indicated how tremendously important he felt the ceremony had become. Then as he passed out of the chamber, there on two opposing pillars before him, were carven stone heads of King George V, his father and King Edward VIII, his brother.

When it was announced Their Majesties were coming to Canada there was a statement that the Lord Chamberlain would come also. The Lord Chamberlain said so, said he would be needed for ceremonial.

Friday's difficult ceremony went off without a single hitch. "Your people here can teach the Lord Chamberlain something," said a famous London press correspondent.

HAVE DONE WELL

So the officials of Canada's parliament are feeling they have done well. Considering that there were no precedents, nothing to guide them, the officers of the Canadian parliament did a magnificent job.

Royal Show Short Scenes

HAMILTON, Ont., May 20.—Alderman Agenes Sharpe, who has not sworn the oath of allegiance to the King because of its implied willingness to bear arms in defence of the crown, said today she had decided to forego the honor of being presented to Their Majesties here June 7. Her objection to taking the oath is on pacifist grounds. In a message to City Clerk James Berry, she said: "Rather than contribute one dissenting note on this occasion, I will forego the privilege of being presented."

TORONTO, May 20.—Toronto authorities expect between 3,000 and 4,000 persons will need medical attention along the route of the royal procession here May 22. Every fire station in the city will be turned into an emergency hospital for the day.

SUDBURY, Ont., May 20.—An illuminated address, the work of Sister Dereida of St. Joseph's convent here, will be presented to the King and Queen during their visit here June 5. The scroll, on parchment, will bear an expression of fealty on behalf of the citizens of Sudbury, Copper Cliff and district. Tassels with the scroll are weighted with nickel-coppey ore.

WINNIPEG, May 20.—C. E. Moore, executive member of the Manitoba Restaurant Association, today denied Winnipeg restaurants affiliated with the association would raise their meal prices when the King and Queen visit here May 24. His denial followed a report that the cost of restaurant meals would be doubled during the royal visit.

QUEBEC, May 20.—The cruisers Southampton and Apollo, which escorted the liner Empress of Australia on its trip to Canada with the King and Queen, sailed from Quebec today for New York. The cruisers will go to Halifax in June shortly before the King and Queen, their North American tour at an end, sail for England.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 20.—S. A. Wallace, chairman of the council of the Canadian Corps Association here, said today some members of the corps had declared they would not register for guard duty during the royal visit to Windsor June 6 unless A. L. Moor, ex-serviceman, was reinstated as manager of the civic parks department. Moor was dismissed May 15 by board of control for reasons of economy.

WINNIPEG, May 20.—"We want to sign up to guard the King and Queen," two youngsters told Major W. L. Robinson as he stood in front of a bank today. The boys thought it was a military headquarters but the major explained and told them to attend their school May 24 and teacher would see that they saw Their Majesties.

VANCOUVER, May 20.—A delegation from the Relief Project Workers' Union called on Mayor Lyle Telford today to assure him there will be no unemployed demonstrations in Vancouver during the visit of the King and Queen May 29 and 31.

LANGLEY PRAIRIE, B.C., May 20.—Officials said today they expect at least 5,000 persons will line railway tracks near this Fraser Valley settlement, once a Hudson's Bay Company post, to catch a glimpse of the King and Queen as the royal train passes through May 31.

Posing for Canadian Photographer

This charming portrait of the royal family was taken on the grounds of Windsor Castle by Gerald Richardson, Star Newspaper Service Staff photographer. Mr. Richardson, along with Lawrie Audrain, of Winnipeg, had the honor of being the first Canadian photographer ever to take pictures of the royal family by "royal command."

Texas Must Be Really Fascinating Place Thinks Her Highness the Queen

By FRANK H. KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, May 20 — Queen Elizabeth thinks Texas must be a fascinating place. There isn't any chance of spotting the Royal Tour, but in conversation with this correspondent at probably the most unusual reception British sovereigns ever gave, she talked about the United States southwest with great interest.

She seemed intrigued to know an American newspaperman went from a London post to faraway Texas. George Stewart, press liaison man at Number 10 Downing Street, now with the Royal party, told her.

"Texas sounds like a fascinating place" she said.

"I am sure you would find it so, Your Majesty," this somewhat nervous reporter said, striving for that restrained understatement characteristic of the adopted sons of the Lone Star state.

NOT REALLY NECESSARY

It wasn't really necessary to say "Your Majesty" because "Ma'am" would have been proper.

The King and Queen added newspaper writers attached to the Royal train to their admirers by the way they handled in friendly informality more than 100 Canadian, British and Foreign journalist guests when, through the Governor-General of Canada, Lord Tweedmuir, they "commanded" the reporters to a reception at Government House.

"Are all of you going?" asked the astonished Queen as she entered the crowded room, and she seemed somewhat relieved when told that only about 50 would accompany the Royal train on the trans-continental tour, others being members of the parliamentary press gallery at Ottawa and local writers.

FRIENDLY PAIR

The King and Queen shook hands with everyone present and found subjects of mutual interest with many. She asked the women writers whether they were enjoying the experience. The consensus among the guests was that she would make a good inquiring reporter.

The King talked less, but with easy, quick questions when he wanted to know something.

"I saw you standing in a chair at the Stadium yesterday," he said to a London photographer. "How in the world did you get back to Montreal in that crowd?"

"You certainly are in there punching," said a New York tabloid reporter to his Britannic majesty. "I don't know how you can take it."

King George laughed. Maybe he didn't know what the slang meant, but he seemed to like it.

The Queen wore a short jacket frock of powder blue lace, the hem edged with net and grey suede shoes. Diamond and sapphire clips at the neckline, a double chaine of large pearls and pearl button earrings encircled with diamonds completed her costume.

The King wore an informal jacket with striped morning trousers.

The Governor General was not present at the ceremony, Lady Tweedsmuir entered the vice regal box shortly before Their Majesties entered, but His Excellency was nowhere to be seen. Dr. Gauthier, deputy clerk of The Senate, who for many years has held the bills for royal assent made one slip. He said "May it please your Ex. . . ," but quickly recovering said "Your Majesty". Otherwise speakers and clerks of Senate and Commons, Gentlemen Usher and Sergeants at Arms were letter perfect.

Cloudburst Hits Shackleton: Rips Out C.P. Rail Tracks

SHACKLETON, Sask., May 20—One of the heaviest cloudbursts in the history of southwestern Saskatchewan today brought 2½ inches of rain in two hours and washed out 150 feet of the Canadian Pacific railway track on the Swift Current-Empress branch line.

Railway officials at Calgary last night stated the eastbound passenger train from Empress, Alta., was being held at Battrum, Sask.

Latest reports from Shackleton stated it was still raining there.

Horse Disease

TILLSONBURG, Ont., May 20.—Outbreak of equine encephalomyelitis among horses in this district was reported today. Hundreds of horses in western Canada have died of the disease in the past three years.

MINIATURE IS GIVEN QUEEN BY MONTREAL

MONTREAL, May 20—While Montrealers today cherished the memory of gracious Queen Elizabeth, the Queen had a souvenir of Montreal in the form of an ivory miniature of her daughters, the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose.

Emile Vaillancourt, head of the committee in charge of the royal celebrations, presented Her Majesty with the miniature.

The miniature, in ivory and on a red plush base, is the work of Juliette de Lavoix and was made for the Earl of Bessborough when he was Governor General of Canada.

Quake Causes Panic

ARICA, Chile, May 20.—An earthquake caused a panic in this town of 15,000 at 2:45 p.m. Friday. Although many walls crumbled, no persons were reported injured.

General Dies

LONDON, May 20.—General Sir Thomas Astley Cubitt, Queen Victoria's governor of Bermuda from 1931 to 1936, died here today.

TORONTO PLANS FOR BIG SHOW MONDAY NEXT

Details Of Legislative Reception Are Made Public

TORONTO, May 20—Details of the Ontario legislative reception to the King and Queen on their Toronto visit Monday were released today by lieutenant-governor's committee on the royal visit.

Following a parade after they detrain at the North Toronto station, the King and Queen will arrive at the legislative buildings, escorted by a Royal Canadian Dragoons detachment, at 11:45 a.m. E.D.T. They will be met by Premier and Mrs. Mitchell F. Hepburn at the entrance and will proceed to the chamber.

Guards from the Ontario civil service war veterans' association will line the main hallway to the bottom of the stairway.

PREMIER TO ADDRESS

In the chamber the premier will hand an address to His Majesty. Mrs. Ian Strachan, wife of the government whip, will present a bouquet of flowers to the queen.

Mr. Hepburn then will introduce Ontario holders of the Victoria Cross, cabinet members and the leader of the opposition and their wives, and Hon. James Clark, speaker of the house.

The speaker will present the remaining members of the legislature and the clerk of the house, Major Alex Lewis.

TO SEE QUINTUPLETS

Their Majesties, following the presentations, will enter the lieutenant-governor's suite to receive the Dionne quintuplets. They will rest for a brief period before the Queen presents colors to the Toronto Scottish regiment, of which she is colonel-in-chief, on the north campus of University of Toronto.

Mrs. Albert Matthews, wife of Mr. Cranswick was equally opposed to "fuss."

"We're just plain ordinary folks," she said.

They have five children, 12 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Nonogenarian Couple Wed 72 Years Plan To See King and Queen

VANCOUVER, May 20.—A nonagenarian couple married 72 years ago laid simple plans today to see their King and Queen but both agreed there'll be "no fuss and palaver."

Ninety-four-year-old Henry Cranswick and his 97-year-old wife will have to step only a few yards from their little Fir street cottage as the royal procession passes May 29.

The sight of King George and Queen Elizabeth will probably bring back memories of a similar occasion 57 years ago when they saw Queen Victoria driving through the streets of London in a horse-drawn carriage.

Mr. Cranswick, bright and humorous, spurned the idea he occupy a chair on the royal tour route.

"The idea," he said, "treating me like an invalid. If I can't see my King without a lot of fuss and palaver, I'll stay in my front garden."

the lieutenant-governor, will escort Her Majesty in a short walk in the campus. The King will change from uniform to morning coat before leaving for a luncheon at Hart House, University of Toronto, at 1:05 p.m.

Mrs. L. S. Klinck Of Vancouver Dies

VANCOUVER, May 20.—Mrs. L. S. Klinck, wife of the president of the University of British Columbia, died at her home here last night. She had been ill for some time.

Leave For Training

CALGARY, May 20.—A detachment of 12 members of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserves will leave here today for annual training at Esquimalt, Vancouver Island.

"I see you drive a Chrysler"—

YES...in addition to luxury, power and performance, I like MODERN design in a motor car—when it makes sense! I think the lines of this Chrysler do that in a rather distinctive way. There seems to be something Chrysler has beyond mere good looks that makes it stand so far out from the crowd. It surprises me, how often people remark, just as you did now..."I SEE YOU DRIVE A CHRYSLER."

The Province Can't Do It All

There is one aspect of the Jasper highway project that may not have got the attention at Ottawa which it deserves. From Edmonton to Edson the country is fairly settled, and the provincial Government is responsible for providing a good highway that far, though not necessarily a highway of the tourist-route standard. But from Edson to Jasper there is little settlement at present and little in prospect. That section of the highway is required as an inlet and outlet to and from the park, more than for any other purpose. The money which the province is spending on the highway this year may carry the work as far as Edson. Is the highway going to stop there?

With all the demands that come from well settled parts of the province for highway construction there is a limit to what any provincial government could spend on a highway or section of highway not urgently required for ordinary purposes—however useful the road might be as an inducement and facility for tourist traffic.

In fairness the Dominion ought to provide for construction from Edson to Jasper, and will almost certainly have to do so now or later. If the province has to foot the bill there will not be a tourist highway from Edmonton through to the park when the Lake Louise-Jasper highway is opened next year; and the tourist business—which the Dominion is so properly trying to cultivate—will suffer accordingly.

The Minor Key

Commentators on both sides of the Atlantic and of all non-axis countries agree that Premier Mussolini's speech at Turin was definitely in a minor key. In that respect it is in keeping with the trend of his previous speeches of recent dates. These have been proceeding steadily toward an anti-climax from the resounding belligerency of the old "balcony" days. It is apparently no part of the premier's policy now to convince other countries that he contemplates deliberate war. This certainly was the inference he seemed to want them to draw from his earlier declamations. He is still insistent upon what he calls Italy's "claims", and still defiant rather than conciliatory in his demands for a hearing; but he no longer openly threatens a resort to force.

The important point is that the growing mildness of the Mussolini tone has synchronized with the speeding up of rearmament by Britain and France, the pointed reminders from Washington that the United States is not a disinterested spectator of the progress of aggression in Europe and the Orient, and the alignment of European states in a league for mutual defence. But for these unlooked-for reactions Il Duce would no doubt still be thundering his demands as he did when the democratic countries were unprepared to protect themselves.

It is doubtful that Mussolini ever meant to launch a major war, but he hoped to gain territory indefinitely by threatening to do so. The bluff, if it was a bluff, has been played out. The lines have been drawn and the dictators told plainly that the policy of threat is a squeezed lemon. Herr Hitler may or may not appreciate the changed situation. Mussolini does.

Headed for Jail

It is to be hoped every driver of a motor car in Alberta has made note of the announcement that reckless drivers are to be dealt with in future under different legislation than has governed such cases in the past. Hitherto prosecutions have been made under the Traffic Act. Hereafter they are to be taken under the Criminal Code. The Traffic Act provided that a convicted person was liable to a minimum fine of $15 and costs, and a maximum penalty of $50 and costs, for a first offence. But the section of the Criminal Code reads as follows:

"Every one who drives a motor vehicle on a street, road, highway, or other public place recklessly, or in a manner which is dangerous to the public, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the nature, condition, and use of the street, road, highway, or place and the amount of traffic which is actually at the time, or might reasonably be expected to be on such street, road, highway, or place, shall be guilty of an offence, and liable,

"(a) upon indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or to both imprisonment and a fine, or

"(b) on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or to both imprisonment and a fine."

Nothing said here about lenient treatment for first offenders. That is left to the courts. Nor is it a condition for punishment that the reckless driver must have run into some person or damaged another car. To have driven recklessly is an offence in itself calling for a jail sentence or a fine or both. And it is up to the driver, notwithstanding the wording of traffic regulations, to use his judgment as to what is reckless driving at the time and place. These are points worth remembering. What they mean is that the reckless driver is headed for jail.

Editorial Notes

Many happy returns to His Majesty King George VI, whose official birthday anniversary is today, and who will be 44 years old on December 14th next.

The Campbell Government, which held all the seats in the last Prince Edward Island legislature, has been returned with supporters in all but four of them. This is the first time since 1915 that a ministry has survived a general election in the Island. The record and policy of the present administration must have left little room for dissatisfaction.

Japanese marines were withdrawn from the international settlement at Amoy when United States, British and French marines were landed to see they did not set up one of those "autonomous" governing juntas the Japanese have been setting up elsewhere in China as a blind for their plans of conquest. The incident is not important, but the significance is. The aggressors cannot boss the world unless the other powers are weak-kneed enough to let them do it.

Malcolm MacDonald's new scheme to set up Palestine as an independent state seems to have induced unanimity of a kind among the Jews and Arabs there. Both are against the scheme. The Jews see in it the abandonment of the Balfour declaration. The Arabs see in it a hope that they may wrest still further concessions from London if they keep on making trouble. The unfortunate thing is that Hon. A. J. Balfour did not live to administer the declaration, or to explain to the two factions exactly what he meant by it.

Canada and German Exports

At various times the criticism has been heard that the Canadian Anti-Dumping Duties operate somewhat harshly against the United Kingdom exporter, but it is only recently that we have met the suggestion that they are administered in such a way as to enhance to German exporters the value of the German Government's export subsidy. . . . While it is possible that German exporters may seek to secure some advantage by ringing the changes on the various forms of exchange available for external transactions, the Canadian regulations lay down clearly how the prices quoted shall be checked. Moreover, among the duties carried out by the staff of the Canadian High Commissioner in London are periodic visits to the Continent for the purpose of checking the prices given in these exports. Should discrepancies be found, action is taken to correct them. But most encouraging of all to the United Kingdom exporter should be the fact that German exports to Canada have been steadily decreasing for some time.—Ironmonger (London).

Pitched in a Lower Key

In one part of the speech he delivered in Turin Premier Mussolini implied that he and Herr Hitler are agreed that no problem engaging the attention of the statesmen of Europe today requires war to deal with it. "If we may take the Fascist chief at his word, and there would seem to be no special reason to doubt it, the threat of armed conflict which has been a nightmare for many months is disappearing. That is not to suggest that the Rome-Berlin axis is about to assume the status of a museum piece of international statecraft. But it savors of a somewhat begrudging admission that neither on the Italian nor the German front is there any likelihood of an immediate spectacular or any other kind of coup. True, the Italian dictator turned his eloquence on the signs of the fasces and swastika, warned that both Italian and German armies would march—if they were provoked far enough—to order and preserve peace with justice." At so late a stage, however, a "warning" of this sort seems pitched in too low a key to be heard above the sound of totalitarianism's retreat.—Victorian Times.

A Dominion Election

Now that the decision has been made to adjourn Parliament for only a few days during the arrival of His Majesty in Canada and at the capital, it is possible to go further and express the hope that no general election will be held this year.

There has been no statement that an election will be held. Mr. King's only statement on the subject, a good while ago, was that there was no reason why the life of this Parliament should not go on to its normal end; and that argument is still valid. But many rumors are in circulation that the Government is considering the advisability of going to the country this autumn. We hope this is not so.

There are, so far as we are aware, no reasons why there should be an election in 1939. There are instead many reasons why an election in 1940 would be better. The Government would have to take into account, for instance, the charge which would inevitably be made, that it hoped to capitalize upon the interest and excitement of the royal visit. This would be an unfair accusation to make. The visit of Their Majesties stands high above party, and part the Government plays in the visit is the part not of a Liberal Government, but of the representatives of the sovereign people who happen at this moment to hold office. Nothing is further from Mr. King's mind than to appeal to the people that he should be re-elected to office because to him fell the honor of arranging the royal visit and of accompanying the King on his tour.

It would be easy to avoid the possibility of this charge being levelled against him by abandoning any discussion of a general election this year.

But there are more important reasons than that to weigh against a 1939 appeal to the country. The normal life of Parliament is five years. Only in certain circumstances should any Government reduce the length of that life. If a Government should suddenly change its course; if it abandons the pledges which it made at the time of its election for new pledges; if an historic party crisis arises; if the country is polled between elections; if it should be seriously threatened in Parliament in such a way that it is manifest it has lost the confidence of the people; then, and only then, is a Government justified in going to the country.

But none of these conditions exists now. Instead the exact opposite is the case. The Government has pursued a slow and cautious policy (some think too slow, too cautious) towards the goals which it set itself in 1935. The program is by no means finished. Much remains to be done. In these circumstances it is clear that the duty of the Government is not to go prematurely to the country, but to stand by its guns and do its best to carry its program to completion.

Many problems remain to be tackled. We have only to instance the Government's wheat policy to see that nothing permanent has been achieved there. Changes are now being made, changes which on the whole deserve commendation, but it is apparent now that it cannot be carried out completely between now and six months hence. The Central Mortgage Bank legislation is another case in point. The Government is in a stronger position if it carries through that legislation and makes the first attempt to apply it in practice before holding an election. If it does not, the plan becomes a campaign document and little more. This is not desirable.

In the field of fiscal policy, Western Canada feels, and feels strongly, that much remains to be done. Reduction of the tariff by treaty has been carried on, but the burden of the tariff remains far too high, and the West still eagerly awaits further action in removing the load now resting upon our primary producers.

Other problems of reform and adjustment remain to be considered, and these can be met if the Government follows the wise course of delaying an appeal until 1940. Mr. King and his colleagues are better fitted to deal with them than any alternatives which are available today, and the responsibility upon them is clear to fulfil the mandate they received in 1935 and maintain it.—Winnipeg Free Press.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

The new military pact between Italy and Germany didn't even deceive the high contracting parties. No agreement can make them any more united or disunited for war, than they have been for months past. Both nations are led by men with a single eye to their own country's interest. Neither of them would want to go to war for the other. Hitler, if his words mean anything, does not want any major war. He wants only "little wars" with no risk.

"LITTLE WARS" ONLY, WANTED

Can you take any other meaning from his Reichstag speech when he said, "I do not believe that every conflict must have disastrous consequences for the whole surrounding world—that is, for the whole globe—provided the whole world is not systematically drawn into such conflicts by means of a network of nebulous pact obligations." He wants only little wars that are localized, with no nebulous commitments. In which a major power threatens to crush a small neighbor unless it submits—like the Austrian "anschluss" of March, 1938, the seizure of unarmed Czecho-Slovakia, or the Good Friday Italian conquest of Albania. That is why Hitler raves against what he calls "encirclement."

Italy at best is a doubtful ally, as she proved in the Great War. Under Mussolini she is still more likely to be swayed by desire to be on the winning side. Hitherto she has been used by Hitler to pull his chestnuts out of the fire—and left unrewarded. There are seemingly well-authenticated reports that the Italian people are ripe for revolt if Mussolini plunges the nation into war to help Germany. In Milan, groups are reported to have paraded the streets with banners inscribed, "Down with Germany. Down with Hitler." A number of persons are said to have been killed and injured in the fighting when soldiers were ordered to break the parades.

MILANESE IN PROTEST

Mlle. Genevieve Tabouis in Paris "Oeuvre," who reported the Milan story as "unconfirmed," declares she has confirmed a report from Undine, Italy, that numbers of Italian reservists broke from the line and commenced jeering with crowds of civilians at a nearby camp of German reservists. The auto road from Milan to Brescia, over which great numbers of German soldiers pass, is being guarded by Italian troops, says Mlle. Tabois, to protect the Germans from the insults of the Italian populace.

The family of dictator nations is not a happy one.

The safe but slow trip across the Atlantic of the Royal party, guarded by fleet cruisers, is a reminder to folk ashore of the fog perils of the deep. Theirs is the fog that is the bane of ship reeling and its passengers reaching are not the problem to mariners that fog is. Ships are built to stand bad weather; no ship can navigate with safety near icebergs or fishing banks off Newfoundland, without risk. Two staunch fishing schooners from Boston collided and foundered in the same fog that held back the Empress of Australia and its consorts.

BEATING THE FOG FIEND

I recall an east-bound trip of the old Allan liner "Corsican" when the fog horn was lashed down off Cape Race and she went hooting all the way across the Atlantic in a fog that covered the whole face of the deep. No sun or stars were through on the way across, therefore no observations were taken. The stout liner never saw an object from the time she left Cape Race till the Bar lightship was picked up in the mist outside Liverpool. She navigated across the ocean, down the North Channel and into Liverpool Bay by dead reckoning—by logging the day's run and allowing for drift of the ocean currents. That was seamanship—but it never got a paragraph in a newspaper.

Most tricky still is the navigation of the coastal craft in our own Pacific waters, feeling their way by compass and fog horn, whistle and bell, in and out of the swirling waters of the Vancouver Narrows; timing themselves in the channels of the inner passage by the echoes of the whistle from the rocks on either side.

I remember a trip on the old "Princess May" with Captain John Locke who later perished in the Princess Sophia disaster. We anchored and fell at night somewhere near Seymour Narrows. The skipper slowly nosed the vessel along. Any minute I expected a disaster. But he knew exactly where he was. A man was plying the lead. "There's a little bay here with a settler on shore. When you hear his dog bark let go the anchor," he said.

For minutes that seemed like hours the vessel slowly forged ahead. Then came the bark of a dog and down went the anchor. Next morning when the sun shone, I marvelled all the more how we'd ever got into that snug little harbor.

Religion Day By Day

"BE YOUR AGE"

Youth's current slang has stereotyped the phrase, "Be your age." And that is what Paul is saying to the Christians of Asia Minor, as he begins the application of the tremendous first half of his Letter to the Ephesians. The time has come to put away childish things, and to measure to the stature of a full grown man, in the fullness of Christ.

Doubtless in Ephesus and its daughter churches, as in our own town, there were church-members who never had advanced beyond the infant class. They had not learned to walk worthily of the calling wherewith they were called. "Be no longer children," he exhorted. To them had not yet come the vision of attaining unto the unity of the faith. They were still in the spirit of "God bless me and my wife

My son John and his wife
Us four, no more. Amen."

Here is a good place to meditate upon the thought that a grown-up church is a church that gives "diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Less of parochialism and denominationalism will ever fill the mind of the Christian who contemplates "One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all."

We want to grow up into an understanding and practice of what it means to be a mature Christian. O patient Father, Help us to bear ourselves wisely as members of the great Church that is the body of Christ. Amen.

Read Ephesians 4:1-16.

Investigate First

Editor, Bulletin: A great importance to the parents is the subject of education. Quite naturally we want the finest, and look to the teaching profession as one of honesty, sincerity, and purpose.

After many years associated with the pedagogical field, and with two children to tutor, I interviewed a teacher who advertised and stated that he was a graduate of a prominent English university. Accepting his as one of the sincere ones who are devoted to their life's work, I did not ask for references. It was unfortunate that I failed to recognize the fact that "all is not gold that glitters."

My advice to all parents desirous of educating their children under a private tutor is: require the finest references—not one, but three—educational, religious and professional. Then you will not be sorry.

Must Be Awakening

Editor, Bulletin: J. C. Metall's letter about party government deserves commendation. His demand that "there must be an awakening of the Canadian people to establish in Canada what it has never had . . . a parliamentary system of government free from political party influence" should be the demand of all.

Mr. Metall says that the members of the party are dominated by the ministers. In regard to the old line parties, he could add that the ministers are dominated by the party machine . . . and the party machine is dominated by the vested interests who contribute heavily to the party funds.

No wonder we have a mock parliament and a pseudo democracy.

If we are to continue, there must be an awakening. We must get rid of partyism. We must get a free parliament with the interests of the people and not the party, at heart . . . their first and only responsibility.

The old parties have had their day. And they have failed. So get rid of the old parties . . . or they will get rid of democracy.

Which shall we have?

Defends Community Leagues

Editor, Bulletin: We congratulate your paper on its news item concerning the unwarranted interference with the Federation Community Leagues of Edmonton in connection with their Carnival, by the Chamber of Commerce.

The Federation of Community Leagues—I have a ticket—are not raffling a car. They are selling tickets to their Carnival and offering a car as a prize. That is their privilege and in my opinion and that of many others is quite legal. So why all the fuss from "business-man?"

On This Date

In Ottawa, by the terms of the British North America Act, both languages are on a parity, even in stone. It is part of the compact by which Cartier secured the assent of French-speaking Canada to confederation, and cannot be changed. And, for one, I am concerned, why should it be! Some of the objectors ignore altogether the fact that French still plays an important part in British parliamentary procedure. The very words by which royal assent is given to bills passed by parliament at Westminster is still given in Norman French, and is not the King's motto "Mon Dieu et mon droit"?

As for that supreme court stone, there are ample precedents. The original cornerstone of the parliament buildings, laid by the then Prince of Wales in 1860, had both languages; so has that laid by the Duke of Connaught in 1917 for the present buildings; and so also has the foundation stone of the Peace Tower laid by the still later Prince of Wales in 1919.

Apart altogether from the fact that more than a third of the population of Canada is of French-Canadian descent, it must also be remembered that a very large proportion of the population of Ottawa itself is now French-speaking. Indeed, I should not be surprised if the next census should show that the French-speaking populace exceeds the population of English tongue at the capital.

George Cartier (who died on this same date in London, England, in 1873) foresaw this when he gave his assent to the choice of Ottawa as the capital. He said it would open the door of Upper Canada to French-Canadians and permit their expansion into the west. In which he was a true prophet, because one of the most amazing, and little considered facts of the last half century has been the transformation of whole sections of eastern and northern Ontario, into French-Canadian areas. While the French language is not official outside Ottawa, it is the home language of thousands of people in eastern and northern Ontario.

Prisoner: That's right, sir. After that I seemed to drift into a life of crime.

A traveller was boasting in a public bar of all the wonderful things he had seen all over the world. No sad there was nothing he had not seen.

A quiet little man got up from a corner of the bar and said politely: Excuse me, sir, but have you ever had the D.T.'s?

No, of course not, snapped the traveller.

Then you've seen nothing replied the little man, quietly.

Once when Rowland Hill was making an appeal for charity a note was handed to him stating it would be right for a bankrupt to subscribe.

During his sermon Rowland Hill mentioned the fact and said that no person could in Christian honesty subscribe if he were a bankrupt; therefore he should advise you who are not insolvent not to pass the plate without giving, lest your neighbor should say: There goes the bankrupt!"

Major And Minor Notes

By John Oliver

Proof that high class music and musicians are appreciated in this city has been given on many occasions in the past and if any further evidence were needed it is in the report received from Mrs. Ernest Meaden, president of the Women's Musical Club and secretary of the Celebrity Concert Series of concerts which the Club is sponsoring for the 1939-40 season. The indefatigable Mrs. Meaden who is at her Hutchman and Company store office these days—every day—reports that considerably more than 700 reservations have been placed for the series which will commence on Oct. 6, with Herina Glatz, Viennese coloratura as the attraction. The number of those already enrolled for the season is an increase of more than 100 over the figure at the same time a year ago for the season 1938-1939. This is most satisfactory and is convincing evidence of the merit of the Celebrity Series of past years—which shows they can be relied on—and also to the energy displayed by Mrs. Meadon and her associates in organizing and furthering the series.

Although artists who appear before the public on occasions receive the appreciation to which they are entitled, such is not always the case. Of the many splendid artists this city boasts, few have given of their time and talent more graciously or more generously than Violet Cumming, whose contralto voice has charmed music lovers here and across the Dominion on many occasions. So here is an incident which shows how a memorable performance will cling to the memory and also how a meritorious event will remain and be appreciated. A few days ago this writer was walking along Jasper and a friend hailed him. The friend went into a discussion of music, radio and musical pictures and associated matters with this writer doing the listening. Finally the subject concentrated on singing and this writer's friend said. "Do you know the finest performance I have ever heard on the radio?" to which this writer quite naturally replied in the negative. "Well" said the friend, "it was on the opening program of CJCA's station in the Birk's building. The soloist was that Scottish girl, Violet Cumming, and she sang, When I Grow Too Old to Dream. I have never heard anything on the air that I enjoyed so much. I will never forget it. The chorus that sang with her was just lovely too."

This story is passed along as a tribute to Miss Cumming and the many fine performances she has given both on the air, the concert platform and on the stage. That her singing of Sigmund Romberg's lovely ballad, When I Grow Too Old To Dream, was a masterpiece of art is evident. The program referred to, was given around March 21, 1935—long time for one item to be kept as "tops" in a music fan's memory. Miss Cumming sang the song twice, once during a half hour of the opening program on the national network of the CBC and once later in the evening by request. She was supported by a chorus of 18 voices, especially picked and trained for the occasion. Such tributes as this are rare and being so well deserved, merits special mention.

Mrs. Ethel Norbury, Edmonton pianist and composer is being honored by the annual convention of the Canadian Music Teachers Federation, which is being held at Saskatoon in July. In the course of the convention a Canadian composers program is being presented and one of the numbers thereon will be a Lullaby from Mrs. Norbury's pen, with words by Mrs. Edith Conquer.

* * *

Mrs. Norbury has made an arrangement of the number for two-part women's chorus. It will be sung by a chorus conducted by Keith Farley, at the Bessborough hotel, Saskatoon on July 4, Mrs. Norbury has many compositions to her credit, including a fantasy, The Vendor of Amulets and a light opera in manuscript form. She has also written a large number of songs and other works and has been represented on various local composers' programs given at the Women's Musical Club.

Lawrence W. Howard, local author of a recently published waltz song has written a patriotic ode entitled Hymn of Welcome (To King George VI and Queen Elizabeth 1939). Whether the words have been set to music Mr. Howard does not say in forwarding them. The sentiment in the words certainly stresses a most cordial welcome for Their Majesties. Here are Mr. Howard's words:

We welcome our most gracious
King and Queen,
Their noble majesties;
We drink to them a royal toast serene,
And pledge to monarchies.
And from the life and gateway of the North
As sentinel does stand,
From whence the time and tide of life go forth,
We give a loyal hand.
We welcome our most gracious
King and Queen,
Their noble majesties;
You are the guiding light of all supreme
And free democracies.
What more are we to ask than freedom's joy,
A sovereign's sanctity;
And so we stand for you, one
And freely honor thee.

Covent Garden, London opened its opera season two weeks ago, traditionally the curtain-raiser of the social season. The opening performance was The Bartered Bride, by Frederick Smetana. The performance has some significance for Smetana, a Czech, filled his music with strains found in Czech folk music and tried to make it a patriotic expression. It was not only the choice of The Bartered Bride that gave the Covent Garden opening special significance. The tenor lead was sung by the Austrian-born Richard Tauber.

Tauber's voice once was the best-beloved in Austria and most-applauded all over Europe. In pre-Nazi days he was pelted with flowers when he sang in Franz Lehar's operas at the Theatre an der Wien in Vienna and it was a poor Austrian or German home that did not own many of his recordings. But his racial background—Tauber is partly Jewish—ended his singing in Germany with the advent of Hitler. Vienna which loved him so well knew him no more after Anschluss. Now, married to a British actress, he carries a British passport.

Giacomo Puccini, mighty master of Italian opera is still a top-notcher and since his death in 1924 he has been gradually gaining appreciation the world over. Many critics who formerly assailed him now rally round his cause. While formerly most persons praised principally his forgrous melodies, now there has come a fuller realization of his wonderful dramatic gift and his infinite capacity for writing for the stage as well as a more profound appreciation of his mastery of art of orchestration, a field in which he stands with the all-time great. In a recent visit to Dallas, Texas, the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, found Puccini's La Boheme the most popular of all its productions, drawing in one performance $19,635. Another proof of his continued attraction is the confession in a recent interview, by Jeanette MacDonald, glamorous singing star of Hollywood, that she cherishes an ambition to sing Mimi in Boheme, opposite the Rodolfo of Jussi Bjoerling, sweet Swedish tenor. In her interview Miss MacDonald said she had turned down several offers to appear in opera, but only because of her Hollywood commitments. She added that she "would undoubtedly appear in opera one day." She is at present on a concert tour of the south, midwest and north-west United States, taking in 75 cities. It is her first concert tour.

Meeting at the home of Verona McVay recently the Aeolian club enjoyed a program of varied piano numbers, by three club members and a guest. It was decided for a theatre party to be held next month. Sarah Simonitch played Bach's Prelude and Fugue in D, No. 3, Vol. 2; Chopin's Waltz in E Minor and Mozart's Sonatas in A; Eleanor Lobb played Bach's Prelude and Fugue No. 7 in E Flat; Chassins' Rush Hour in Hong King and Graham Peel's Prelude and Margaret Burger played the 1st, 2nd and 3rd movements of Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata; McDowell's Rigaudon, Opus 49, No. 2; Chopin's Waltz in G Flat and Bach's Italian Concerto.

Under the auspices of local Ukrainians, Olga Pepkova of Lvow, principal Polish city, will appear in recital at the Ukrainian national hall here on June 3, in the course of her first American tour. She recently sang in Winnipeg before an audience of more than 700 persons and in giving her program of numbers, she won the acclaim of newspaper writers. The program included works by Paderewsky, Rachmaninov, Chopin and others. Her appearance here should be a well-received and most especially in her country people.

Here's What $2 Will Buy in Plants

By DONALD GRAY
Bulletin Landscape Consultant

EVERY amateur gardener is interested at this time of year in getting effects in his garden this summer by planting annual flowers.

Annual flowers give more for the money than any other investment. If the plants are raised indoors the expenditure is only a fraction of a cent a plant. If the plants are purchased they are 5 to 10 cents a plant. A very economical way to buy annuals in the spring is to buy them in flats from growers rather than in individual pots. Small plants can be purchased at a third the price in flats and if they are planted in the garden as soon as danger of frost is passed they will do just as well or even better than potted ones.

If the gardener is not too impatient he can plant the seeds in the open ground and achieve results for the summer months with a very small expenditure.

Some gardeners live in rented houses and do not want to spend much money on permanent planting. The plan here shows how seeds or plants can make a home out of a house. The seeds would cost less than a dollar. The plants if purchased would cost less than $2. It might be better to buy plants because it takes too long for some of the seed to produce an effect.

(Plan 1)

To get an effect of all summer in a border in front of a perennial garden, here is a suggestion of different color combinations. Plants are recommended except where noted.

(Plan 2)

Plan No. 1
1—Tithonia Speciosa (orange)
2—Cosmos Early White Colossal (white)
1—Petunia Elk's Pride (purple)

Plan No. 2
1—Snapdragon Nelrose (pink)
2—Ageratum Blue Ball (blue)
3—Sweet Alyssum Little Gem (white)

CUTTING GARDEN

List of good annuals:

Annual larkspur, pink, blue, and white (seeds).

Cosmos, early varieties, pink, and white. Dwarf orange (seeds).

Zinnias, all colors (seeds).

Calendula, yellow and orange (seeds).

Marigold, various varieties, orange and yellow (seeds).

Batchelor Buttons, blue (seeds).

Aster, all colors (seeds).

Verbena, all colors (seeds).

Annual blue anchusa (seeds).

Tagetus, an orange dwarf marigold-like plant (seeds).

WHY AIR-CONDITION HOME? THE ANSWER IS GIVEN HERE

Air-conditioning is the science of duplicating in the home a healthful, wholesome atmosphere. It recognizes that dry heat, stagnant and polluted air in winter—and sweltering weather in summer—is not a fit substitute for an ideal atmosphere. This modern system completely conditions the air by:

1. Warming it to the proper temperature in winter.
2. Humidifying it to the proper degree in winter.
3. Filtering out dust, dirt, bacteria, and foreign matter the year round.
4. Circulating the air, providing healthful ventilation the year round.
5. Cooling the air in summer.
6. Dehumidifying the air in summer.

Winter air-conditioning is held vital to good health. Summer air-conditioning, while required for a shorter period, is highly desirable. To obtain a climate as equal as that which can be enjoyed in an air-conditioned home, properly planned, you must journey to a very few select places, which nature has seen fit to favor particularly. At these places congregate those who can afford to leave behind the discomforts of disagreeable climatic conditions.

MOST IMPORTANT

Nothing in life is as important as the air that surrounds us. Sixty per cent of our energy comes from the air; forty per cent from food and drink. The average person inhales 35 pounds of air each day or about five times the weight of food and water consumed.

You know there is a large amount of dirt and soot in the air because you can see it. This is especially true in urban centres where industry is belching its smoke into the air. You are continually dusting. Measurements have shown that from one to five tons of soot are deposited daily in an average city for every square mile of area. Every housewife knows the external effect of dust-ridden air.

The internal effects are more serious. You breathe each day more than 400 cubic feet of air. Estimate the amount of polluted foreign matter suspended in the air, which has gained entrance to your lungs. The foreign matter includes bacteria and germs which attach themselves to

Business Rise

CANBERRA, May 20—Australian industries produced goods valued at $760,000,000 last year, compared with $710,738,580 in 1936-37, the Commonwealth statistician reports.

MERCHANTS IN KEEN CONTEST ON DECORATION

Decorative preparations for the Royal visit find keen rivalry between South Side and North Side merchants to make Their Majesties wonder which is actually the main thoroughfare of the city.

Banks, financial institutions, government and civic buildings have decorations well advanced and erection of many will be commenced Monday. The large department stores will present very creditable decorations, specialty stores will do likewise.

Many of the smaller stores have still to develop plans and Fred V. Hollands, chairman of the sub-committee of merchants on decorations, is afraid there may be a serious shortage of flags and bunting during the final week with no opportunity of replenishing stocks or supplying needs.

"Business has been rather tough but my place of business is not going to be conspicuous by the absence of decorations for this historic occasion," is a statement heard from some of the business men of Edmonton.

Those serving on Mr. Holland's committee are Chester Moffet, John Keller, Chas. Gilley and Chas. S. Fallow, South Side.

Mr. Hollands paid a visit to Hook & Ladder mass productions factory in the Education Building, Exhibition Grounds and was amazed at the organization. Under Col. Louis Smith, chairman of Royal Progress preparations, everything has been rushing and there is a dignified style to the decorations.

Hundreds of frames of red, white and blue bunting are ready for erection, also hundreds of crowns and other devices featuring the lion and the unicorn, brought out in colors.

"My first hopes that Edmonton will be second to none in the Dominion are going to be realized," Mr. Holland declared confidently.

WHY BUY ICE?

Here's 5 Reasons Why You Should Buy ICE And Own an Air-Conditioned ICE Refrigerator

1 CONSTANT COLD — Which Protects Foods Against Spoilage
2 PROPER MOISTURE — Which Prevents Rapid Drying of Foods
3 CLEAN WASHED AIR — Which Guards Against the Mingling of Flavors
4 NO MESSY DE-FROSTING — Nothing To Get Out Of Order

5 And You Save $156.30
OVER A 5-YEAR PERIOD WHEN YOU BUY AN AIR-CONDITIONED ICE REFRIGERATOR

Here is a comparison in cost of Refrigeration with a modern Ice Serviced Air Conditioned Refrigerator versus a nationally advertised electrically operated refrigerator, over a five year period. Both refrigerators have approximately the same storage capacity, viz: 4.75 cu. feet, with shelf area of 9.6 square feet.

PARIS ICEDAIRE		ELECTRICAL
First cost	$ 68.00	First cost
Depreciation	10.00	Depreciation	$221.50
Ice at $25.65 year	158.25	Current at $9.00 year	50.00
Interest on $68.00 at 6%	20.40	Interest on $221.50 at 6%	45.00
	$256.65		$382.95

THIS SHOWS A SAVING OF $156.30 over the 5 year period, which is sufficient to purchase another 6 years ice supply.
As the Air Conditioned Ice Refrigerator has no mechanical parts to get out of order you still have a first quality refrigerator which is good for many more years service.

Open senior violin solos: Edward Raho.

Open piano duet: 1, Kathleen Keyes and Olive Kowensky, Grande Prairie; 2, Eva Alexander and Noreen O'Connell, St. Josephs School. Senior open piano solos: Kathleen Keyes.

Open piano solos: 1, Kathleen Philp, Grande Prairie; 2, Ethel Gudmundson, Clairmont.

The improvement in one-act school plays was truly wonderful the adjudicator said in choice of play atmosphere and presentation, they were far in advance of last year's offerings.

Graded school plays: 1, Montrose School, grade 3, "The Elves and the Shoemaker"; 2, St. Joseph's School, intermediate, "The Gift."

High school plays: 1, St. Joseph's high school, "Who Gets the Car Tonight"; 2, Spirit River high school, "Convergence Height." Equity school won the ungraded public school play with their fine presentation of "The Princess and the Woodcutter."

Special awards: For the most outstanding performance in dramatics, Margaret McBride, Spirit River. The Mona Cooke Memorial Cup for the most outstanding musical performance of the festival was won by the Valhalla Centre mixed quartet.

WETASKIWIN

SCHOOL DIVISION AT WETASKIWIN HOLDS MEETING

The monthly meeting of the board of trustees of the Wetaskiwin school division was held this week in the divisional office. It was decided to limit all delegations to 15 minutes before the board unless an extension of time is granted. C. O. Jevne was appointed to interview the Millet school board on matters of tuition.

It was reported by the secretary-treasurer that several debenture coupons had been presented for redemption. The board passed a resolution authorizing the payment of current debentures.

Plans were inspected for new school buildings and B. C. McRae and J. R. Rickard were appointed as a building committee for the proposed schools in the Bulyea and Pipestone districts.

A well attended meeting of the executive of the Wetaskiwin board of trade was held in the Driard hotel. A program for this year was drawn and a membership committee, consisting of L. J. Ragosin, B. D. Howatt, Roy Ballhorn, C. R. Rasmusson, Ed. Peterson and H. A. Inglis were elected to conduct a membership drive.

Several changes have been made in the staff of the Bank of Montreal here of late. J. R. Youngman has recently been transferred to the Banff branch and will report for duty there next Monday. He is being replaced by a man from the Vegreville branch. Wilfred Gordon, of Red Deer, who was relieving as junior for three weeks, has gone to Olds. His place has been filled by Miss Marian Manley.

The Arctic Service Station is erecting a new office building. The new structure is to be stuccoed and will ad considerably to the present place of business. Johnny Gleason is the local manager of the firm here.

PONOKA

CITY GIRL IS GIVEN HONOR AT GRADUATION

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

Solemnity marked the occasion as the 1939 graduating class of the provincial mental hospital entered the decorated recreation hall.

Invocation was given by Rev George Young, of Ponoka, and Dr. R. R. McLean, medical superintendent, acted as chairman and opened the exercises.

TELEGRAMS

Telegrams of congratulation were read from Claresholm, the Calgary General hospital, Miss C. Lynch of Winnipeg, former superintendent of nurses, and from the class of '37.

Dr. M. R. Bow, deputy minister of health, brought greetings from the provincial department.

Diplomas were presented by Dr. Bow and the pins by Miss C. N. Jackson, superintendent of nurses.

The address to the graduating class was given by Dr. J. S. McEachern, Calgary, who traced the history of medicine.

Musical numbers were presented by Miss Betty Taylor, Calgary, with Miss Peacock, of Calgary, as accompanist.

PRIZES AWARDED

Dr. T. C. Michie, in the absence of Hon. Dr. Cross, presented the prizes which were awarded to the graduating class: Miss K. M. McCaskill, Edmonton; R. K. MacQueen, Miss L. M. Sheridan; second year, Miss Lefsrud, J. Thomas; first year, Miss D. Campbell, G. Avison.

Members of the graduating class: Jean V. Fin, Drumheller; Mary E. Freeman, Westlock; Lillian G. Mackie, Athabasca; Kathleen M. McCaskell, Edmonton; Ethel B. Pesho, Athabasca; Rachel H. Scott, Edmonton; Loral M., Sheridan, Drumheller; Marie R. Thiemann, Munson.

Attendants: R. K. MacQueen, Lamont; O. Gorgopa, Ponoka.

Following the exercises a reception was held in the nurses' home. Mrs. T. C. Michie, Mrs. P. C. Hamilton, Mrs. S. M. Sneddon and Mrs. A. C. McGrigan presided at the tea tables.

The easternmost point of the United States is West Quoddy Head, near Eastport, Me. The westernmost point is Cape Alva, Wash.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE

Heavy rains that have covered all the district in the last two days, have extinguished the forest fires that burned on every side of the town. While these fires were very bad, and driven by unusually high winds, few settlers suffered any loss. Scott Murphy of Bingley lost his log house, but saved the contents and his outbuildings. A shift in wind stopped the fire west of town from jumping the river. Forestry officials think most of the fire danger is over now for some time, as this rain was the heaviest of the year.

BOWDEN

A real cloudburst and hail storm hit Bowden and district Thursday evening. Gardens were washed out but little damage was done to crops.

"I was South and opened the heart jack. My partner won with the ace and East played the five spot. North returned the heart nine and East covered with the queen. I won with the king and dummy discarded a small spade. What was my next correct play? I feared that East still held the eight and another heart, and so I shifted to the spade jack, figuring that to set the contract I would need another lead from partner. I thought it probable that my partner had a trick somewhere in the hand and that, even if this trick developed, we would not set the contract if I first cashed my heart ten and set up declarer's eight spot. There were no long suits in sight, so I thought this was my best defense. However, you can see what happened. After my shift East ran off five no trump. Please criticize and explain the proper play. W. J. S. Philadelphia."

Despite the terribly disappointing result on this hand, from the defenders' point of view, I am not inclined to be severely critical of South's shift to the spade jack. This does not mean that I approve South's reasoning, nor that I feel a master player in his position would have defended in the same way. But it cannot be denied that South was "on the spot." It was quite true that declarer might have started with the Q-8-6-5 of hearts and that the cashing of the ten would merely establish the eight. But I call attention to the bidding on this hand. East had opened fourth hand with one no trump and presumably had his full honor count. Dummy's diamond suit, although only four long, was impressive, and South could suspect that the club suit also might be good for four tricks with the help of the A-Q-x or A-J-x in the concealed hand. The spade suit was, of course, an unknown quantity, but if East had first round control he would be able to rattle off nine tricks if his clubs and diamonds were as they figured to be. Thus, South's outstanding hope, I think, was to find declarer with an original holding of no more than three hearts. Obviously, if the heart ten were laid down, North would have to unblock the eight spot.

Incidentally, I must point out that in most cases it is correct for the partner of the opening leader to return his own fourth highest of the suit led if he held that many cards in the suit. In this case, however, I agree with North's choice of leading back the nine instead of the deuce because the latter return would run the grave risk of blocking the suit in case South had started with a five card suit.

But aside from all discussion of the proper defense, I cannot see that North-South had much to kick about in this hand. East-West were absolutely cold for six spades, diamonds, or clubs, and even though they would have great difficulty in bidding a slam, surely the 180 points for making six spades (the major suit would be chosen) would exceed the five no trump actually scored. Hence, it appears to me that North-South must have received an excellent match-point score on this board, regardless of the debatable defense.

Don't Worry, Your Majesties!

By MILTON BRONNER
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

LONDON, May 20.—If you see King George and Queen Elizabeth, please tell them that their two little girls are well and busy as bees, and that everybody is trying to keep them from being too lonesome.

Princess Elizabeth and her sister, Margaret Rose, have just been to the Zoo, fed the elephants, watched the baby panda, ridden in a cart behind a llama. All in all, their days are pretty full.

Just like any other dutiful little daughters, they are remembering the final admonitions of their mother:

They must be good little girls. (They promised.)

Elizabeth must look after little sister. (She will.)

Studies as usual. (Yes, mother.)

You can entertain your little friends. (Oh, fine!)

ADMIRAL'S FLAG

When the King and Queen departed for America, they left behind two sad little princesses, who are seen at left. Margaret Rose wiped away tears, while Princess Elizabeth held a handkerchief—just in case. But the tears turned to smiles and whoops of glee when they were taken to the London Zoo, and, as shown above, watched the clownish antics of the giant panda.

FOLLOW THEIR USUAL PROGRAM

As much as possible, the Queen arranged the routine for the children so that it would be very much as it is when she is in England.

Each Friday afternoon one of the Palace cars takes them down to the Royal Lodge, Windsor, for the week-end. Here they swim in their pool, go riding in the park, and drilling with the Girl Guides company to which they belong.

On Monday morning, just like any other little girls, they return to their home, which happens to be Buckingham Palace and, like other little girls, for five days they resume their lessons. Princess Elizabeth has displayed a special enthusiasm for French ever since she tried it on President and Madame Lebrun of France during their recent visit to London.

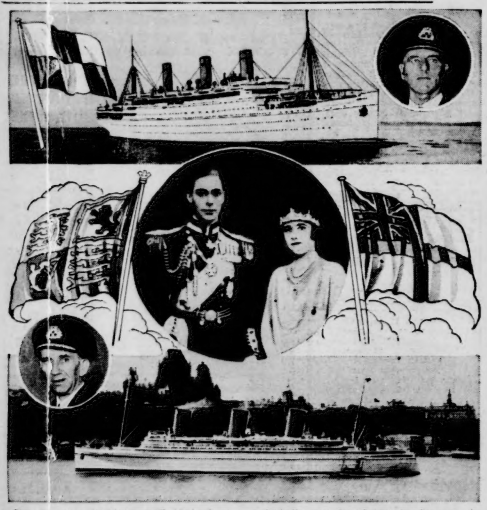
The meals of the children are served as usual. When Mrs. Knight, their monitor, gives the O.K., they will entertain some of their friends at luncheon or tea. They will also go on visits with Queen Mary, who will be in residence in Marlborough House not far away from Buckingham Palace.

THEY'RE GOOD CORRESPONDENTS

Once a week from the Palace and once a week from Royal Lodge, Windsor, they will each write letters to their parents, telling them everything they have done and how they are. On the other hand, the Queen will talk to the children daily from both Canada and the United States. She will give them full details of all the wonderful things the King and Queen are seeing.

But one thing she will not tell them—the presents and souvenirs she is bringing back to them from United States and Canada. Those will be their big surprise.

Two Royal Liners Carry King and Queen



Two ships of the British Mercantile Marine have been honored by His Majesty the King, who with the Queen and members of their Royal retinue, are travelling to and from Canada in ocean liners of the Canadian Pacific fleet. The 21,000-ton Empress of Australia, graceful and yacht-like as seen above at the top, brought Their Majesties to Quebec on May 17, while the giant 42,500 flagship Empress of Britain will sail from Halifax on June 15 with Their Majesties on Board. The Empress of Britain, in the lower picture, is seen steaming majestically past the Chateau Frontenac as she approaches her berth at Wolfe's Cove, where the Empress of Australia landed her Royal passengers. Inset at the top is Captain A. R. Meikle, R.D., R.N.R., who commanded the Empress of Australia on her Royal voyage, and at bottom Captain C. H. Sapsworth, commander of the Empress of Britain, which is now ending her annual Round the World Cruise. The Royal Standard, White Ensign and Canadian Pacific houseflag, which the two liners fly on their Royal voyages, are also seen in the picture grouping.

Smart Senora

The growing reputation of Latin-American countries for modishly-dressed women received added impetus when Washingtonians recently saw Nicaragua's First Lady, Senora Somoza, in this smart outfit. With her husband, President Anastasio Somoza, she was a White House guest.

Australia's New Prime Minister And His Mate

The Rt. Hon. Robert Gordon Menzies, Prime Minister of Australia, and Mrs. Menzies, in their most recent studio portraits. Mr. Menzies resigned from the positions of Attorney-General for Australia and the Ministry of Industry in March because of the government's decision to abandon the National Health Insurance scheme. He was, however, elected leader of the United Australia party at Canberra on April 18, and named premier. Mrs. Menzies, a daughter of Senator J. W. Leckie, of Melbourne, is on the committee of the Children's hospital and a great worker on behalf of charity.

The Queen Mother

This is one of the most recent photographs of England's beloved Queen Mother. She was pictured thus as she arrived at a Welfare Society lecture on "Inside Buckingham Palace," in Londonderry House, London. A few days later Queen Mary travelled to Portsmouth to say farewell to her son, King George, and her daughter-in-law, Queen Elizabeth, as the royal couple sailed for Canada.

Food Instead Of Bombs

Air warfare from a new angle—British Royal Air Force planes drop packages of food, attached to parachutes, as scheme for getting supplies to battle-beleaguered groups is tested near Folkstone, Eng.

He's Chauffeur

Chauffeur of the Governor-General, Thomas Southgate is shown here at the wheel of one of the cars he will drive throughout Canada as acting chauffeur to Their Majesties during their Canadian tour. Above the windshield of the car can be seen the royal crest, and behind it the blue light that will be used to illuminate it at night.

King Zog, Queen

Seen as they arrived at Istanbul where they were afforded sanctuary by the Turkish government, are King Zog and Queen Geraldine of Albania, who fled their former kingdom when the troops of Il Duce poured in to take over the country in the name of Italian King Victor Emmanuel. The queen is gradually recovering from shock and privation caused by her flight, which took place but a few days after she had given birth to a son. Zog, a Mohammedan, is reported to be a candidate for the throne of Syria, where it is felt he would receive Moslem support as a bulwark against the inroads of Italian Fascist ambitions.

Summer Storm

A Bulletin Short Story Complete on This Page Every Saturday — By Juliet Wilbor Tompkins

STORM signals were sent all down the coast and the radio told of a big blow coming. The water rushing between the island and the mainland was the same murky gray as the sky that pressed down on it.

Anne had planned a sparkling golden day for David's return, summer sun and a fair wind coming down to the landing in white—not hurrying, just serene and smiling welcome and, of course, lifting her face for his kiss. Close reefed in wool, she could not do it so well, and this ominous weather, this sense of a great pounder coming, spread the pounding of her heart through all her body, so that her hands betrayed her.

Storm or no storm, David would come. She had the habit of smiling over Davie's ways, his exact keeping of an engagement, his tidy alignment of his possessions. She went into his old room to be sure that his brushes and things were in a soldierly row, but tears suddenly blurred them and she ran out again, closing the door.

"I have got to be strong!" she said aloud. She had been saying, "I must be strong" for six months, and, with riding and walking, she had come back bodily erect and newly vital. Not to spoil it all by agitation—that was the strength demanded of her now. She took a seat by the great fire blazing in the living room, hands quiet in her lap, head well up, eyes steady.

Six Months Since Anne Saw David

The last time she had seen David, six months ago, she had been sitting by a fire, the smaller fire of a city apartment, feeling as safe, as peaceful, as she was now trying to look. It was David's very solidity, his inconquerable honesty, that had kept her from seeing what had been going on all these months, and perhaps had kept David himself from seeing it until too late.

She had been invalidish last summer, from an operation, and of course David must have his golf and tennis and swimming. She could lie on her veranda and see little figures darting about on the Tremaine tennis court just across the channel and diving into the Tremaine pool.

That Sally Tremaine was always there did not once cross her mind as a danger. Sally was a spoiled, powerful girl who went straight for what she wanted, but—danger with David! And after seven years of happy marriage! How could anyone think that?

He was out a good deal in the autumn months and rather absent at home, but business conditions were disturbing. That explained everything. And then, one January evening, there he was standing before her, white but controlled, asking her to release him, that he might marry Sally Tremaine, who had had a hard time, poor soul, getting it through her head.

They had talked half the night. No angry reproaches or pleadings. They had been very considerate, very modern. Perhaps too modern, Anne thought, long afterward, when she was alone and could let her heart break. But she could not fight to keep him—not that way.

Anne had not seen David in the morning and she had left in the afternoon for California. She had his promise that he would wait six months. That was all she asked of him. She would give him himself six months, seeing all he liked of Sally, then come to her on their island and let her if she was still sure. Her health would explain the trip west.

Not a word had passed between them since and no outside news of David or of Sally had reached Anne. She had come back to the island only two days ago, and yesterday she had seen little figures on the Tremaine tennis court. David might be one of them, for all she could tell. The caretakers, Pete and Della Reilly, who cooked and served for them in the summer, had evidently heard nothing. They asked with candid affection when the master was coming.

David Returns On Anne's Insistence

Whitecaps were leaping in the channel and the wind and weather a distant sound about the house. When 4 o'clock struck Anne went to the window, smiling unsteadily at the memory of David's habit of down the date and hour in his little book.

Soon enough, there was a power boat slipping into the calm water of their cove. David stepped out and spoke to the boatman, then turned to the house. The face he lifted looked older, graver. This was no carefree bridegroom! Suddenly Anne was strong all over, body and spirit.

She waited for him at the front door, laughing a little as the wind pulled at it and sent her fair hair streaming across her forehead. She had to shake it out of her eyes as she kissed him.

"Hello, David!"

"Well, Anne!"

They stood in the hall looking each other over. David's dark strength had a beauty that always hurt, on happy homecomings.

"You seem pretty fit," he said surprisedly, then added: "Well, I came."

"Of course you did," she said, "or you insisted on it." Resentment was vaguely a relief. He might have hurt her at a distance by being urbane.

"Of course you did," she said cheerfully, "I knew you would. You must have had a rough crossing."

"Yes, and it may get worse," David said. "I told the boat to be back in an hour."

He was telling her that his mind was made up and that his coming was a form, and Anne met it squarely.

"Then you are still sure, David?"

His "Yes" was short, averted, but that might mean consideration for her. They sat down facing each other, across the hearth and David ran a slow hand down his chin, as he always did in difficult moments. If only his little ways were not so poignantly familiar! The wind was making the house shudder, but neither noticed it.

"You are sure that Sally means happiness?" Anne began.

That startled him into a quick look up. "Happiness? I don't know about that. It isn't a question of happiness, exactly."

Then what is it?"

He had to search for the word. "It is—like a possession. Something that gets you. I didn't dream it could happen to me, but—it did."

The new lines in his face moved her unbearably. "Perhaps the six months must have been pretty hard," she said.

"Oh, yes. Hell." He drew a sharp breath. Resentment had vanished before her frankness. "And it wasn't made any easier by knowing that they were hard on you, Anne."

Yes, that must have hurt you horribly," she assented. "I have wondered since whether I didn't behave too beautifully. If I had let loose and shown——"

"You didn't need to," he interrupted. "We know each other too well. I knew what I was doing to you. And that you didn't make a scene—I was on my knees to you. I am still," he added with a dim smile.

"Well, it is something, to have that," Anne said. Spray from across the pool was rattling on the windows, crusting them with salt, and they moved their chairs nearer, to hear more easily. "David, isn't it a comfort that we don't have to talk about money!"

Long Rides With Henry Brought Back Strength

David was going to talk about money. "That is nonsense! You won't have enough, Anne. I shall settle plenty on you, whether you want it or not." He went into it in detail but could not move her. Anne let him talk, but only shook her head for answer.

"But why, Anne?" he persisted. "We are still friends, aren't we? Why can't you let me provide decently for you? If you would rather have a monthly check than a settlement——"

She showed a flare of anger. "Alimony! You can't do that to me. If I am not your wife, you don't owe me anything."

He was deeply hurt. "It is not kind, Anne. If I have got to think of you as hard——"

"I shan't be hard up," she declared. "It isn't unfriendly, David —it is just that I don't need it. Of course if I had children——" She broke off, remembering her operation. They had planned to send little David to a nursery. "I can't spend much on the ranch," she went on hastily.

That startled him. "You are going back?"

"Oh, yes. It is a wonderful life. And Rose wants me just as much as Ted does." She talked about her brother's orange groves and the horses and dogs and Rose's family on the adjoining ranch. She was not sure that he listened until she came to Rose's brother Henry that had given her back her strength.

"I suppose there think I am a hound dog," he said, frowning.

"They didn't say so to me."

"What did you tell them?"

"Why, the straight truth. That you wanted to marry some one else."

The wind literally screamed, and they sat averted until it died down again, the hard truth standing out naked between them.

"You couldn't expect them to understand that you being you," David said heavily.

"Oh, everybody understands that nowadays," she reminded him. "On the whole, if it did hurt you rather too badly, they were glad of it. They all want me to marry Henry," she said that casually and did not appear to notice how hard it struck David's whole body grew rigid.

"And—are you contemplating it?" The words creaked with his effort. Evidently it had never crossed his mind that Anne's life also would go on.

"Well, I am rather a monogamous sort of person," she said reasonably. "Henry is a lamb. He might come to it, in time. I don't mean to die of this, David."

"No—no. I want you to be happy," he muttered. "But is this Henry good enough for you? Funny question from me," he threw in, trying to laugh at himself.

She considered Henry. "We like the same things. He is very kind. Pleasant looking. He rides and rides beautifully. Oh, yes, he is good enough for any woman who likes——"

A burst of wind struck the house like a cannonball and a shutter banged loose overhead, shocking them back to what was happening. They ran upstairs to David's room and fastened it, curtains streaming over them.

"Some storm!" David exclaimed. As the curtains subsided his eyes fixed on the familiar familiarity about him with a look of surprise, as though it were strange that a thing should be the same after so much had happened to its owner.

"You wouldn't like to have this house?" he suggested at last, only smiled. "Of course you wouldn't," he apologized. "I must seem to you the grandest fool on earth. I am only wishing—I can't realize that I shall never see you at all."

Again anger flared up. Had he thought that he could have two wives? "This is good-by," she said lightly. "I am going back West tomorrow. Now, if it is all settled——"

Another shutter burst loose, this time in Anne's room, and they found the catch broken. It took all their strength, to hold and tie it shut. From these windows they could see the wild chaos in the channel. Not a boat was out.

"If that man had any sense, he would come back while he could," David exclaimed. He had been careful not to look at Anne's room.

"Oh, this can't last," she assured him as they went back to their fire.

Anne Couldn't Say That Master Wasn't Staying

Pete and Della, beaming welcome, had brought in the tea things and fresh logs and turned on the lights, evidently taking the master's coming as a happy surprise. While David was talking male matters with Pete, the boat and the pump, Della intimated to Anne that she was not to worry about the dinner. Her nod said trust her for a proper feast.

Anne could not say then that the master was not staying. She must go out to the kitchen after David left and tell them. At the thought of their incredulity and their grief, her courage nearly broke down. With all her sick heart she wished that she had not made David come. It was a crazy hope that had driven her to inflict this torture on them both.

David and Pete went up to the pump house while the water was boiling, so she had time to get herself in control again. David came back with blown hair and blackened hands, his spirit lightened by the simple mechanical troubles, and ran upstairs to brush up. It was so like all their summers!

Anne felt that any moment the nightmare would break and she would find David sleeping happily within reach of her hand. She even touched the hot kettle, to awaken herself. Then, accepting everything, she vowed that this last tea together should be something to remember warmly. No more bitter thinking when he came down; she was kneeling on the hearth rug, toasting bread on a long fork. They had always made toast; toast and rides beautifully. Oh, yes, he is good enough for any woman who likes——"

Pete can fix it. I have shown him just what to do," David said, pulling up his chair and taking the fork from her. "You won't be any more bother with it." Then he saw what he had said, but Anne, pouring tea, did not seem to notice.

"Will Della make a pudding, of course Pete has to be rather dumb," she said amusedly. "It is the way I like to end up the dinner, too." Ted advertised for a couple he insisted on putting in. 'One of them must be sober.'"

"Did it work?" David asked, glad to follow her lead.

"Yes, it did. A grand couple came rocking with laughter over the joke They will stay for life."

She had really funny tales of their struggle with service on the two ranches. She had always loved rousing the sudden shout of David's laughter. He had been rather a sober person until her fun had released and charmed him. That other girls had found him very good to look at had only bored him until there was Anne.

And she had exciting things to tell him; the time the Jersey bull got out and stood pawing up the driveway, bellowing challenge, like a monster out of the Old Testament, the spring flood that carried away a chicken house and threatened the stables.

"We all take part in every thing," she explained. "Life is not divided up as it is here——I go to business and I go to a concert. I held a sick calf's head while Ted dosed it—I brought in eggs in my hat. When a neighbor got on fire, the whole countryside went over to help fight it. You would love that life, David. You would be fixing the pump every day!"

His dark eyes had a somber glow. "I know. Bodily work and animals and outdoors—I've always wanted that. Remember how we used to talk our farm? But you wouldn't have liked it, Anne. You like social life."

She stretched her arms up over her head, a gesture of utter weariness. "Oh, never again this way! We have horse shows, races, hunts, and now and then we drive twenty or thirty miles to dinner. And in between we read and listen to radio music, and play contract; if four people can stay awake. I kept thinking how it would suit you and how stupid I had been not to see from the beginning that that was all life."

"Ah, well, I had to make money," he reminded her. "I never wanted it on a small scale."

"Well, you have made your money, you have plenty now," she said dispassionately. "Why not pull out and do what you want to do?"

Was So Natural Being Together

She had so stirred him that he had to get up and walk about the room. He asked questions about climate, water, soil, prices, and she was as full of new knowledge as though she had been preparing for this moment, though the idea had only just come to her.

A secret purpose made her incandescent, for never in this world would Sally Tremaine accept such a life. David might be thinking that she would, for Sally was a tireless sportswoman, but Anne's knowledge of her was deeper. Sally would never consent to cut herself off from the life she knew and the crowd she went with.

"Dinner is served," Della announced from the doorway.

David started. The clock was striking seven.

"Your boat couldn't come back in this storm," Anne said, speaking casually over racing happiness. Not for one moment had she forgotten the time. "You might as well have your dinner."

He stood frowning, hesitating. "Sally is expecting me for dinner." He had to speak harshly to get it out at all.

Anne showed no sign of hurt. "She is not expecting you if she looked out of her window! She knows where you are, of course. Why don't you telephone?"

Human life must be saved, no matter what the cost

David tried to, but the wind had put the line out of commission. Sally's name had broken the charm that had lain on the past hour, and they ate rather silently. And yet, in spite of everything, it was so natural, being there together! They did not have to talk, to be at home with each other. And Della's excitement, that was translating. Perhaps neither had eaten much that day.

When they left the table, David put his hand through her arm, just as he always had, and it sent the old delight through all her being. Surely he must feel it, too—it was not all here! Anne looked up into his face, acknowledging the message, smiling infinite understanding. He had to smile back, but his eyes were tragic.

Anne brought out the card table and the cribbage board. "Remember?"

He remembered. One fearful night they had grimly played cribbage hour after hour, bracketed across Anne's berth with the board between them, while the sea and the ship fought for life. They had never played the game since.

How they had loved each other that night, with the roar of the blast that nearby drove in the windows brought back a sense of heaving decks, a great burst of rain came sluicing down the panes, pouring like the sea on their portholes. Anne could hear their voices coming out of the past, held down to everyday quiet. She had said, "David, if there is any choice, I would rather die with you than live without you."

And then David: "But, Anne, there is only one thing that could make dying easier, and that is knowing that you were safe."

Then Anne, crawling on her knees, had found the cribbage board. She had said, "Well play for it, my lover—if I win, we stick together." And she had won every game until a mighty lurch had overturned everything and cast her into his arms. How they had loved each other!

"The rain will beat down the waves. Then your boat can come over," Anne said, to show that she was not trying to hold him—not for one moment.

David made no answer.

Cribbage Proves To Be Absorbing Game

At first he played absently and Anne's score ran away. Then he roused himself to fight. They had always played games with competitive earnestness, no quarter given and debts rigorously settled. By their intentness, they might still have been playing for shelter in a shipwreck they should stay together.

The little pegs traveling about the board brought their hands close. An hour went by, and another. They did not notice when the rain and the wind died down and the sea's spell lay on the room, shutting them in together like a bright picture screen when lights go up. They were very still and David showed nothing, but a light not from lamps shown in Anne's face.

She was still kneeling when a log long toot from the cove shattered their cocoon and tipped them out into flat, cold reality. David went over. Not any more! Lord, if I ever have to go to another cocktail party! Only there we do it in a big way—we have horse shows, races, hunts, and now and then we drive twenty or thirty miles to dinner. And in between we read and listen to radio music, and play contract; if four people can stay awake. I kept thinking how it would suit you and how stupid I had been not to see from the beginning that that was all life."

"Ah, well, I had to make money," he reminded her. "I never wanted it on a small scale."

"Dinner is served," Della announced from the doorway.

David started. The clock was striking seven.

"Your boat couldn't come back in this storm," Anne said, speaking casually over racing happiness. Not for one moment had she forgotten the time. "You might as well have your dinner."

He stood frowning, hesitating. "Sally is expecting me for dinner." He had to speak harshly to get it out at all.

Anne showed no sign of hurt. "She is not expecting you if she looked out of her window! She knows where you are, of course. Why don't you telephone?"

David tried to, but the wind had put the line out of commission. Sally's name had broken the charm that had lain on the past hour, and they ate rather silently. And yet, in spite of everything, it was so natural, being there together! They did not have to talk, to be at home with each other. And Della's excitement, that was translating. Perhaps neither had eaten much that day.

When they left the table, David put his hand through her arm, just as he always had, and it sent the old delight through all her being. Surely he must feel it, too—it was not all here! Anne looked up into his face, acknowledging the message, smiling infinite understanding. He had to smile back, but his eyes were tragic.

Anne brought out the card table and the cribbage board. "Remember?"

He remembered. One fearful night they had grimly played cribbage hour after hour, bracketed across Anne's berth with the board between them, while the sea and the ship fought for life. They had never played the game since.

How they had loved each other that night, with the roar of the blast that nearby drove in the windows brought back a sense of heaving decks, a great burst of rain came sluicing down the panes, pouring like the sea on their portholes. Anne could hear their voices coming out of the past, held down to everyday quiet. She had said, "David, if there is any choice, I would rather die with you than live without you."

And then David: "But, Anne, there is only one thing that could make dying easier, and that is knowing that you were safe."

Then Anne, crawling on her knees, had found the cribbage board. She had said, "Well play for it, my lover—if I win, we stick together." And she had won every game until a mighty lurch had overturned everything and cast her into his arms. How they had loved each other!

"The rain will beat down the waves. Then your boat can come over," Anne said, to show that she was not trying to hold him—not for one moment.

David made no answer.

Cribbage Proves To Be Absorbing Game

At first he played absently and Anne's score ran away. Then he roused himself to fight. They had always played games with competitive earnestness, no quarter given and debts rigorously settled. By their intentness, they might still have been playing for shelter in a shipwreck they should stay together.

The little pegs traveling about the board brought their hands close. An hour went by, and another. They did not notice when the rain and the wind died down and the sea's spell lay on the room, shutting them in together like a bright picture screen when lights go up. They were very still and David showed nothing, but a light not from lamps shown in Anne's face.

She was still kneeling when a log long toot from the cove shattered their cocoon and tipped them out into flat, cold reality. David went over. Not any more! Lord, if I ever have to go to another cocktail party! Only there we do it in a big way—we have horse shows, races, hunts, and now and then we drive twenty or thirty miles to dinner. And in between we read and listen to radio music, and play contract; if four people can stay awake. I kept thinking how it would suit you and how stupid I had been not to see from the beginning that that was all life."

"Ah, well, I had to make money," he reminded her. "I never wanted it on a small scale."

"Well, you have made your money, you have plenty now," she said dispassionately. "Why not pull out and do what you want to do?"

Was So Natural Being Together

She had so stirred him that he had to get up and walk about the room. He asked questions about climate, water, soil, prices, and she was as full of new knowledge as though she had been preparing for this moment, though the idea had only just come to her.

A secret purpose made her incandescent, for never in this world would Sally Tremaine accept such a life. David might be thinking that she would, for Sally was a tireless sportswoman, but Anne's knowledge of her was deeper. Sally would never consent to cut herself off from the life she knew and the crowd she went with.

"Dinner is served," Della announced from the doorway.

David started. The clock was striking seven.

"Your boat couldn't come back in this storm," Anne said, speaking casually over racing happiness. Not for one moment had she forgotten the time. "You might as well have your dinner."

He stood frowning, hesitating. "Sally is expecting me for dinner." He had to speak harshly to get it out at all.

Anne showed no sign of hurt. "She is not expecting you if she looked out of her window! She knows where you are, of course. Why don't you telephone?"

David Stops Being a Fool

Moonlight showed the channel still wild. Sally's voice, high with anger, was coming up from the boat.

"Did you think I was going to sit while you stayed all night?"

David spoke with cutting clearness: "I certainly did not think that you would come to round me up."

"Oh, piffle! Don't be a fool, David—get in."

"I have stopped being a fool, Sally, and I am not getting in. You'd better let me send Pete back with you. You may need help."

Sally cried out in fury, but her words were lost in a sudden racket of thunder. The boat darted off, leaving David on the landing.

This was no time to go to him. Anne had turned to mount the path when David's shout halted her. He was running for the boathouse with his head bent, and suddenly thought that he was following, then she saw that Sally's boat had met the waves outside at a reckless angle and was floundering out of control.

David heard Anne's steps flying after him and yelled: "Get Pete!"

"There isn't time!" she shouted back.

"It's dangerous, Anne. I won't have you risking——"

"I can't stay here!" She jumped out into the back hall as he threw open doors. "Pete would lose his head and I shan't," she added, taking the wheel.

The engine sputtered, halted, then mercifully went ahead. They shot across the cove, David ready with a line and lifestrap, and Anne blessed the years of mesting him in any weather as she cut straight across the pounding waves. She had to be saved; every throb of the engine was a pulse beating out that message. Otherwise she would have to down with her some part of David that could never be released.

The searchlight found the dark blot that was Sally's boat rolling in the trough of the waves. Then as they dropped down and seas rose between them, it was gone. The light went, frantically about an empty sea.

"Oh, no!" Anne cried. "Find her —darling, find her!"

David's jaw was clamped, and he sent the engine full speed up to the crest of the next wave. From the top they again saw the boat much nearer. Sally was clinging to the wheel, but the deck was awash and she made no headway. As their light picked her up she waved an arm, a gallant gesture high above her head, and suddenly Anne wanted to save her for her own sake, too. Human life must be saved, no matter what followed. For the moment they were three brave souls fighting death together.

David had a hand on the wheel and was giving terse orders. They must cut across to windward of Sally's boat and get her off without touching it, for any least shock would send it down. Sally understood their tactics and crawled aft drenched with every lurch, clinging to the rail. They were almost near enough to throw the life line when a monster wave broke over them, and once more Sally's boat was gone.

Never So Close In Seven Years

All David's strength was needed to swing them back into the wind. Another second would have swamped them. They cut straight away from the derelict, and for an agonizing time—minutes or hours, Anne did not know which—they were making a perilous circle back. When they found the boat again, it was almost under water, but Sally still clung to the rail, her lifted face a white blur as the shaft of light found it.

David throttled down the engine and, at their cleek steadily on his big buoy high above his head, to show what she must do, at their closest second he threw and Sally caught it. A moment later he had swung her to the deck and, dropping her in a drenched heap, sprang forward to help Anne with the wheel. No one spoke until they slid into the shelter of the Tremaine landing. Then Sally struggled up.

"All right. I made a fool of myself," she flung at them. "Sorry. Very noble of you, Anne, risking your life to save mine. I suppose I've got to thank you?"

Anne, feeling David close beside her, answered gravely: "No, Sally, I am thanking you."

"What for? That was a challenge.

"For being alive."

Sally understood and shrugged. "Yours both better come in and have a drink."

"No," David's voice was resonant, "I am taking my wife home."

They watched the limp figure go dripping up the path, then turned about, facing the lights across the channel, and made the trip in silence. The boat slid into its house and the light was turned off.

"I have been crazy, Anne." David said it with the over-completely over. Can you ever forgive it?"

His hand, fumbling for her in the darkness, found her shoulder and his rough coat sleeve. The strength was against her cheek. The living current swept around them, shutting them in together in the very heart of life. Never in their seven happy years had they been so close, so wholly one.

Our Old Country Letter — By J. E. Norcross

LONDON, Eng. (By Airmail)—"Mr. Chamberlain will puzzle the historian," writes "Atticus" (Sir Beverley Baxter) in the Sunday Times. "Was there ever a man who so sedulously avoided the dramatic and who so consciously attracts the lightning? He confesses nothing of the emotional hunger of his audience. . . . He might well have considered denouncing Hitler many before the world and calling for a holy alliance against him.

J. E. Norcross

"Instead he spoke like a judge invoking the law because it was the law and not that it expressed his own righteous anger.

"Yet his method has a compelling advantage over that of the emotion-mongers. When he is finished, his words do not fade like those on a screen when lights go up. They cut into the memory as if diamond-pointed. They leave no misunderstanding, no uncertainty.

"He announces the principle of armed resistance but refuses to close the door to discussion. Not a word or a phrase of his speech can be used or misused by a foreign statesman as an excuse for delay.

Against which may be placed the howl of execration emitted by a Sunday exponent of the other side of reality, the Extreme Left Says Reynolds News:

"At this, the last moment of the eleventh hour, there remains to Mr. Chamberlain an opportunity—limited by his own crass ignorance and folly, but still an opportunity—to do what the nation requires him to do, and bring into full and effective play the world-wide co-operation in the cause of peace.

"As his treatment of Russia shows, he is misusing that opportunity. He has not realized that he will not continue to misuse it.

"If the united will of the nation is not to be frustrated, if the slide declining drift to war is to be stopped, Mr. Chamberlain's palsied hands must be taken off the helm."

Another opponent of the Prime Minister, the political writer of the News-Chronicle, Britain's second general organ, wearily admits that it is impossible to get rid of Mr. Chamberlain and substitute Lord Halifax for him. The second-last he suggests that Mr. Churchill be taken into the cabinet at once and Sir John Simon sent packing. The latter "is a weak, timid, vacillating counsellor whose influence on the Prime Minister has been altogether deplorable," he writes.

There may be changes in the Government and Mr. Churchill may be taken in, but Sir John Simon goes out it will be of his own motion and because the Government has decided on some policy with which it is not likely to do unless and until war is declared. Sir John parted company with Mr. Asquith on that issue in 1916.

The schism in the Labor Party becomes wider. Two members of Parliament, Mr. Aneurin Bevan and Mr. G. R. Strauss, Sir Charles Trevelyan and fifty other prominent members of the organization have been thrust into the outer darkness. Mr. Bevan is the second-last of the advocating the "Popular Front" Officials of divisional Labor associations who have been guilty of the crime of putting their posts by the executive for the same reason, and one association has been dissolved and re-organized. The hand of Transport House (Labor headquarters) is heavy on all who dispute its edicts.

Sir Charles Trevelyan, a former Labor M.P., was a Minister and a member of the Cabinet as President of the Board of Education, in the last Labor Government. He is a grand-nephew of the late Lord Macaulay and is distinguished as an author.

Writing to the leader of the party, Mr. Attlee, to protest against the expulsions, he says:

"It is an inexpressible tragedy that at this moment, when the influence of the Executive ought to be used for drawing together by friendly negotiation all possible sections of anti-Chamberlain opinion, it should be spending its time in disintegrating the Labor Party by threats, expulsions and anathemas. . . .

"If you are a big enough man you will stop the destruction of the soul of your party."

The party executive, moreover, is seriously divided on the matter. An appeal to it to put a stop to it was strongly advocated by the wisest, oldest and most experienced member of the party, Mr. J. R. Clynes, was defeated by only two votes, thirteen to eleven.

The question will undoubtedly be raised at the annual conference which is to be held at Whitsuntide and which may see the organization of a divided into another independent Socialist party.

Should war break out the first air-raid warning sounded over London would be the death-knell of the venomous snakes and insects kept at the Zoo in Regents Park. They would be killed at once. Larger animals should an explosion set them free without killing them, would be shot.

Everything is being thought out in advance. During the September crisis a number of well-to-do people hurried out of London in their cars and obtained accommodation as far from the danger zone as they conveniently could. Fears have been expressed that that sort of thing might handicap the mobilization of women and children. So, in the event of war, the old rule of "Women and children first." The Ministry of Health says he will not allow people who buy up accommodation in reception areas to interfere with his plans.

Another million steel shelters for small houses have been ordered by the Government which will make no final pronouncement on the question of whether Parliament resumes after the Easter holidays. Expert opinion is against them on account of the confusion that might arise in case of a raid during the night and crowds of people endeavor to make their way to them through streets in complete darkness.

Arrangements are now being made for the distribution of food supplies by air raids. Depots for wholesale firms are being formed into groups so that, should the warehouse or transport facilities of one firm be destroyed, the others may automatically take over its work. By the time the plans are to be completed by the middle of April—one of the signs of the times is the going out of date of plans almost as soon as they are made—the direction under the energetic supervision of Sir John Anderson, chief of the Department of Civil Defence.

Concurrently men are responding eagerly, all over the country, to the request for volunteers for the Territorial Army.

"I appeal for 250,000 men," Mr. Hore-Belisha, War Secretary, said to a Bermondsey audience. "The Territorial Army is the largest volunteer force in the world. Double up and double the T.A."

The response has been particularly good in the north. The call has been addressed with confidence to Yorkshire and also in Lancashire where most of the units are already up to their full peace strength. The crisis has brought out something of the spirit of 1914. Ex-Service men with experience are queueing up to get into the ranks again.

Rory Hitler, in point of fact, is proving the best of recruiting sergeants for Britain.

The Labor Party is strongly with the Government on the Polish issue. Mr. Greenwood, leading the Labor opposition during Mr. Attlee's indisposition, concluded the best speech he has ever made with these remarkable words:

"Should the Prime Minister succeed let will wear the laurels of victory on his brow. The Opposition will not complain. We shall be proud that the policy for which we have consistently stood has borne fruit in establishing enduring peace in the world and a new era of prosperity for its people."

Mr. Chamberlain made a generous response. Mr. Greenwood, he said, had promised them on Friday that the debate which took place then would not be foreign affairs on the following Monday but would be carried on on a high level, "and," he added, "so far as he is concerned he has kept his promise to the letter."

But there was to be still another tribute to the Prime Minister from the Labor benches.

"There may be an alternative Prime Minister to take charge of the affairs of the country at this grave hour," said Mr. E. J. Smith, Labor member for Shoreditch and a son-in-law of Mr. George Lansbury, "but I have yielded to no one in genuinely and sincerely convinced without any mental reservation that it is my duty to put aside party and rallying the friends of peace, and is not looking back on the dead past, but I think, in view of his world reputation as a man of peace, he is probably the best man for the job."

Mr. Chamberlain flushed with pleasure at these generous sung in so unexpected a quarter.

The unanimity of the House was extraordinary. Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the Opposition Liberals; Mr. Churchill, who has criticized the Government more forcefully; Mr. Lloyd George, who has condemned the Government's foreign policy in the strongest terms, and Mr. Edgar Granville declared their support of Mr. Chamberlain.

The resolution previously tabled by Mr. Churchill and Mr. Lloyd George and a number of other Conservatives, asking for a broader-based Government, providing compulsory national service, was withdrawn.

Today's Garden-Graph

Prevent or cure early blight of potato.

In order to have a bountiful yield of potatoes, the green foliage of the plants must be kept healthy. This is especially important during the time the potato itself is really manufactured in the foliage. Anything which destroys the foliage tends to injure and dwarf the development of the potatoes underneath.

When potato plants reach a height of 6 inches they should be sprayed every 10 to 14 days with Bordeaux mixture, or dusted with copper-lime. This dusting should not be done during the heat of the sun. Early morning or in the evening are the best times to spray the plants.

The accompanying Garden-Graph shows the first tell-tale signs of blight on potato plant foliage. Unless prevented or cured by frequent dusting, these brown patches on the leaves spread until the entire leaf and steam becomes infected; and this in turn checks the food development underground and curtails the yield of potatoes.

Here Are Edmonton Traffic Regulations for June 2 Observance

THE above official picture map of the Royal procession route through Edmonton the Royal Visit Committee has given the general public full information not only of the route to be followed, but of the times at which the Royal procession will pass each locality. The schedule for the procession is as follows:

Leave C.N.R. Depot 3:40 p.m; arrive Portage and 101 street 3:45 p.m.; arrive Portage and 121 street 4:00 p.m.; arrive Portage and 101 street 4:12 p.m.; arrive Jasper and 101 street 4:20 p.m.; arrive Jasper and 100 street 4:25 p.m.; arrive Legislative Buildings 4:30 p.m.

Leave Legislative Buildings 5:30 p.m.; arrive 100 street and 88 avenue 5:35 p.m.; arrive 88 avenue and 112 street 5:37 p.m.; arrive 112 street and 82 avenue 5:40 p.m.; arrive 82 avenue and 106 street 5:50 p.m.; arrive King Edward School 5:52 p.m.; arrive 82 avenue and 109 street 6:00 p.m.; arrive Saskatchewan Drive and 109 street 6:02 p.m.; arrive 109 street and 100 avenue 6:10 p.m.; arrive Cenotaph 6:12 p.m.; arrive Jasper and 100 street 6:15 p.m.; arrive C.N.R. Depot 6:20 p.m.

Residents and city visitors must remember that all the route to be followed by the Royal procession north of the Saskatchewan Drive, including the High Level bridge, will be closed to vehicular traffic at 1 p.m. on June 2, the day the Royal visitors arrive. Traffic on the route to be followed on the South Side will be stopped at noon.

EMERGENCY CROSSINGS

Emergency crossings, however, will be permitted across the Royal route to within perhaps a half hour of the arrival of the Royal procession at the individual crossings. But it must be clearly understood that these are only emergency crossings, and that they will only be made at the discretion of the police officer in charge there.

These designated points are as follows: 82 avenue at 104 street; 101 street at 84 avenue; 112 street at 84 avenue; 109 street at 99 avenue; 100 avenue at 104 street; Jasper avenue at 104 street; 101 street at 102 avenue; 109 street at 102 avenue; Portage avenue at 111 avenue; Portage avenue at 109 street; Portage avenue at 116 street.

WHERE YOU CAN PARK

Car owners will be allowed to park their cars anywhere up to within one block of the Royal route; no closer. That is, for one block on each side of the Royal route there must be no cars parked. It will be a case of first come, first served. In addition there is ample parking space both north and south of Portage avenue between 109th and 116th streets and also on vacant lots east of 109th street.

And if you want information on the day itself you'll find that for the convenience of out-of-town drivers the Royal Visit Committee has set up six information booths at prominent points entering into the city.

GET INFORMATION HERE

These booths will be located as follows:

Highway No. 1 (St. Albert Road) at the store of J. E. Scott, 12668 St. Albert Road.

Highway No. 16 (east) Fort Trail, at the Belmont Service Station, Fort Trail and 50 street.

Highway No. 15 (Clover Bar) at Waldie Service, 10102 82 street.

Highway No. 14 (Cooking Lake Trail) Wm. Wright's Service Station, 8940 82 avenue.

Highway No. 16 (west) (Stony Plain Road) at James Wright's Service Station, 156 street and Stony Plain Road.

Drivers coming into the city will not be able to miss the information booths for they will all be marked with signs 200 and then 100 yards ahead, and finally with a nine foot banner in purple and white at the booth itself, with a sign reading "Royal Visit Committee. Information Here."

ROUTES TO BE MARKED

For the benefit of city drivers there will also be numerous signs throughout the city indicating main and open traffic routes to the various sections of the Royal Route. Altogether some 2,000 signs are being set out for the convenience of residents of the city and visitors.

In advance of the procession tickets can be obtained for bleacher seats at Mike's News Stand on Jasper, and outside visitors desiring housing accommodation can telephone 12264 where a staff will be kept on duty day and night to assist them.

HOW TO ENTER CITY

The Royal Visit Committee has made the following recommendations for visiting drivers and others:

For those entering the city from the south the following routes are recommended:

1—No. 1 Highway, via 104 street to Saskatchewan Drive, thence east to Strathcona Road, down Strathcona Road to the Low Level bridge, thence east on Wellington Terrace (Grierson Hill) to 96 street and 102 avenue. From this point traffic may proceed north on 96 street or on any street east of 96 street to Norwood Boulevard.

2—Alternative route—It is suggested instead of following Saskatchewan Drive east to Strathcona Road traffic should turn from Saskatchewan Drive through Riverside Park and over the 105 street bridge, thence along the gravel road to the bottom of McDougall Hill, thence Wellington Terrace (Grierson Hill) as in the former route.

UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL TRAFFIC

3—Traffic from the south desiring to go to the University Hospital and vicinity should proceed along 104 street to 84 avenue thence west crossing the route at 109 street and at 112 street.

4—Drivers of vehicles from the south desiring to go west should, after arriving at 96 street and 102 avenue, go west on 102 avenue, crossing 101 street to 109 street or any other cross-street, thence work their way north to 104 avenue, and westerly thereon to 109 or 116 streets and north to Portage avenue. If 109 street is taken to reach Portage avenue the best route would be to follow 102 avenue west to 109 street, then turn north through the subway.

ALTERNATIVE SOUTH SIDE

4—(Alternative) Traffic entering the city from the south on the Calgary Trail should proceed to 63 avenue, then east on 63 avenue to 99 street, thence directly north to the Low Level bridge, and from these following the crossings indicated in the former suggested route.

5—The traffic from the southeast should use the Clover Bar road and the Dawson bridge east to 95 street, then north on 95 street.

Traffic from the west should use the Stony Plain road and 104 avenue.

Traffic from the northwest will use the St. Albert Trail to 127 avenue, thence east to 97 street, and from there work south into the city.

FROM ST. ALBERT TRAIL

5—(Alternative) Use the St. Albert Trail to 118 avenue thence easterly to 101 street or 97 street and south.

It may be pointed out traffic using 118 avenue would easily be able to reach parking areas north of Portage avenue from 118 avenue.

6—Traffic from the northeast should enter by the Fort Trail on 118 avenue or 111 avenue thence west or south as desired.

HOSPITAL COST IS LESS THAN APPROPRIATION

Expenses Are $10,000 Higher To Date Than 1938 Figure

Royal Alexandra hospital has expended to date this year almost $27,000 of the city grant which is approximately $18,000 more than expended at this time last year, but it is still $5,000 under the appropriation, it was revealed by the finance committee at the regular monthly meeting of the Edmonton Hospital Board Friday.

"The 48-hour week is responsible for the major part of this increase," Dr. F. Anderson, superintendent of the hospital, stated. "In this schedule there are about 275 persons involved.

PATIENTS PER DAY

"There will be a struggle between now and the end of the year, especially during the holiday season, to keep within our appropriation," Dr. Anderson continued, "but we should be able to manage it." Cost per patient day during April was $3.25 as more than during the same month last year.

Miss Margaret Fraser, R.N., superintendent of nurses, reported that from the standpoint of illness among her staff, the month of April had been a difficult one with 140 days' illness among the nurses. Miss Olga Hyrvnak, who for the past seven months has been in charge of the tuberculosis section, has resigned and is being replaced by Miss Nora Williams, a graduate of the Royal Alexandra in 1925.

A special rate of a 25 per cent discount will be made in cases arising from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, it was decided.

Cost of operation of the hospital in April was $42,447, which is $900 less than March, but $2,500 more than April, 1938. Earnings for the month were $16,600, a slight drop from last year.

BIRTHS

Dr. Anderson reported that there had been 34 deaths in the hospital during April, 500 operations, 150 major. Confinements totalled 117 with 119 births. Daily average of patients was 377, with 906 admissions and 899 discharges.

In the isolation section there was a daily average of 42 patients and 26 cases of scarlet fever.

Meals served numbered 72,618, an increase of 1,000 over the same period in 1938.

Dr. John Lees was appointed to the executive staff.

Indian Woman Seeks Share in Estate of Grey Owl, Naturalist

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., May 20—Angie Belaney, Ojibway Indian woman, of Timiskaming district, northern Ontario, will apply to a king's bench judge at Saskatoon May 26 for a share in the $15,346 estate of Grey Owl, author and naturalist who died here April 13, 1938.

She claims to be the lawful widow of the naturalist, also known as Archie Belaney and Archie McNeil, as the result of a marriage which took place Aug. 23, 1910, at the village of Bear Island, Lake Timiskaming.

Grey Owl, or McNeil, married Yvonne Perrier in Montreal Dec. 5, 1936. In his will and codicil, probated last December, he divided his estate between his wife Yvonne and a daughter, Shirley Dawn.

He bequeathed an unstated amount to Anahareo, "my one time companion" and mother of Shirley Dawn but made no mention of Angie Belaney.

NURSERY STOCK IS DISTRIBUTED BY OLDS SCHOOL

More than 700 parcels containing premiums of nursery stock or seed have been distributed this year by the Olds School of Agriculture, to members of the experimental union, according to Hon. D. B. Mullen, minister of agriculture.

Starting 20 years ago, the experimental union composed of former students of the Olds School of agriculture, has been instrumental in distributing small samples of approved varieties of cereals, grasses, clovers, potatoes and other products, among its members.

In recent years roots and seeds of hardy perennials have been added to the premium list. From this stock the members of the union propagate seed for their own use. They are required to submit a brief report which is used to determine the suitability of the various species for Alberta conditions.

12 COMMUNITIES ENTER CONTEST IN BEAUTIFYING

With 12 entries now on the list, interest in the Community Leagues Beautification contest, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, is growing.

In the contest community leagues select a plot of ground which they intend to beautify. Judges are now viewing the plots and in the fall will view them again, marking them for beauty and improvement.

Community leagues which have already entered with the locations of their plots, are: Garneau, 83 avenue and 106 street; Highlands, 116 avenue and 82 street; King Edward Park, 80 avenue and 86 street; Eastwood, 118 avenue and 86 street; Forest Heights, 103 avenue and 82 street; Scona Centre, 85 avenue and 102 street; Oliver, 102 avenue and 118 street; Riverdale, 10138 90 street; Alberta avenue, 118 avenue and 101 street; Westmount, 110 avenue and 101 street; McCauley, 111 avenue and 92 street; Rosedale, 97 avenue and 102 street; Cloverdale, 96 avenue and 96 street.

Committee of judges is headed by W. J. Cardy, president of the Edmonton Horticultural Society.

The hornbill, a bird of Malaya, sheds not only its feathers once a year, but also the lining of its crop.

PROVINCE LEADS IN SELECT HOGS REPORT REVEALS

In the first 18 weeks of 1939, a downward trend is noted in the number of hogs graded to date as compared with the same period of 1938, according to an analysis made by the provincial agriculture department. The percentage of hogs grading "select" has increased, however, by 6.3 per cent, for the first 18 weeks of this year, in which 296,070 hogs were graded as compared with 300,075 in the same period last year.

Hog gradings in Ontario show a similar decline, there being 513,912 in 1938 as against 461,996 for the same period of 1938.

Alberta is slightly in the lead insofar as the percentage of "selects" is concerned. Figures show that 36.5 per cent of the hogs graded this year were marked "selects" In Ontario the figure was 36.1 per cent and in Saskatchewan 38.8 per cent. The importance of a high percentage of "selects" is recognized by all concerned with the swine industry, inasmuch as this grade secures a preference on the British market.

PROVINCE PLANS SPEND $103,450 FOR BUILDINGS

Involving a total outlay of $103,450, three new buildings will be constructed by the provincial government this year and plans for them are now being drafted by public works department officials, it was learned Friday.

Included in the building program will be a $20,000 maternity ward at the University hospital; a $50,750 dormitory building at the Red Deer training school; and $32,700 for a new dormitory building at the Oliver mental institution.

Appropriations for these buildings were ratified at the last legislative session.

Veteran Trapper Rushed By Plane To Hospital Bed

Leaving his trapping grounds in the Lower Post district on the Yukon-B.C. border for the first time since he went into the country in 1896, Frank Watson, 56-year-old trapper, was flown from Watson Lake to Fort St. John where he will receive hospital attention for pneumonia. He was a passenger, Friday, in a Yukon Southern plane piloted by Chief Pilot Ted Field.

Since he went into the north 41 years ago the furthest he has been from his trapline near Watson Lake is to Telegraph Creek, another isolated post 150 miles to the southwest. He is married and the father of two sons and two daughters. Watson Lake is named after him.

INSTITUTE TO GIVE SHELTER CITY VISITORS

Facilities of Bissell Memorial Institute, located at 103A avenue and 96 street, will be available to any visitors, particularly little families, on the day of the Royal Visit to the city, its board announced Friday.

Boyle Street Park is at the rear of the Institute, and country families, with little money, will be made welcome, the board stated. Hot water will be freely provided.

Beverly people are going to use kitchen and other facilities at the Institute and the offer is freely extended to others.

Royal Visit committee said Friday that 54,858 yards of bunting, colored red, white and blue, will be used by Hook Signs Ltd., in its decorations plans for June 2.

Although the committee will likely hold a rehearsal of the Royal Progress especially for purposes of timing, one of the rehearsal has not yet been fixed.

All guests at the provincial government dinner in the Macdonald hotel on the night of June 2 will all facing Their Majesties, as it is an offence against courtesy to sit with one's back to the King and Queen, it was learned.

Mr. Abbott, and other members of the Royal Visit committee, said Friday they are planning to go to

HEALTH CLINIC NOW ON TOUR AT ALBERTA POINTS

Headed for outlying districts in the northern and southern sections of the province, the travelling health clinic, operated annually by the health department, has commenced its work, according to Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, minister of health and in charge of relief.

Dr. A. Brydges is surgeon in charge of the clinic, which includes two medical doctors, two dentists, three nurses and two truck drivers, one of whom is a medical student and the other a dental student.

Cost of the clinic as approved by the legislature in estimates passed at the last session, is $16,255, which represents an increase of $5,127 over the amount appropriated last year.

The clinic opened at Breton on Wednesday and after a two-day stay was due to move on to Alder Flats, 50 miles southwest.

On May 22 and 23, Willesden Green, in the Rimbey area, will see the clinic. On May 25 and 26 the clinic will be at Caroline and on May 29 and 30 it will be at Cremona, west of Carstairs.

From Cremona, the clinic will move into the southeast part of the province, visiting the drouth areas. On June 8 and 9 it will be at Vauxhall; Lomond on June 8 and 9; Hussar on June 12 and 13; Hilda on June 15 and 16.

During June other places to be visited will include Tomahawk, Veteran, Altario, Youngstown, Oyen, Sedalia, Sunnybrook.

From about July 15 to Aug. 15 the clinic will visit the Peace River territory.

Air Veterans May Be Reviewed Here By King George VI

In view of a report that His Majesty will wear the uniform of a high official of the Royal Air Force when he visits Edmonton, it is planned to have veterans of the air force in the last war on review in front of three planes—on skis, wheels and pontoons—at the airport.

Names of veterans residing in Edmonton and district are being sought. The following already have been listed: W. R. "Wop" May, C.A.L. superintendent; C. M. G. "Con" Farrell, C.A.L. assistant superintendent; James Bell, airport manager; W. Leigh Brintnell, M.A.S. president; Neville Robertson, seaplane base superintendent C. C. Becker, ex-president aero club; K. F. Saunders, assistant inspector of civil aviation; T. G. Stephens, inspector aviation; Fred Little, M.A.S. photographer; A. M. "Matt" Berry, Northern Transportation company manager; Ian "Pep" Innes-Taylor, M.A.S. agent here; James Bill, Edmonton Printing manager; Alex. Cunningham, Dominion Motors general manager.

Your Health — By Dr. Frank McCoy

I have had many people tell me that they would not think of taking cherries and milk together, yet I assure you that this is an excellent combination.

There is a popular belief that cherries and milk together form an undesirable combination, but when these two foods are used alone, with nothing else being taken, they will blend together perfectly. Milk usually forms large curds in the stomach, especially when it is swallowed hurriedly, but by mixing it with the cherries, the curd is much smaller and the milk is more easily digested than would otherwise be the case. Try eating a few cherries and then taking a small drink of milk and see what excellent results are obtained.

It is my belief that cherries should not be combined with starch such as bread, or flour. Those who report trouble after using cherries and milk will nearly always be found to have used the cherries and milk with some type of starch. The person with a good digestion may perhaps take this combination without any ill effects, but if the digestion is weakened, the combination of the fruit acid and the starch will often cause distress. The cherries are blamed, when the real source of trouble lies in mixing the starch and acid.

Those who particularly appreciate the flavor of fresh cherries will do well to use this fruit as the luncheon meal, taking all the cherries desired and omitting other foods altogether. Or, if the cherries alone do not prove satisfying, then add a glass or two of milk.

Ripe cherries are among the most tempting of all our fresh fruits and the cherry has been a popular favorite for many hundreds of years. Cherries are among the earliest of all the summer fruits, coming into season in May, June and July, and finding a ready market among those who are hungry for the taste of fresh fruit.

Although cherries are expensive at first, the price drops as the season advances and they become reasonable in price. Everyone should benefit by using them during the relatively short season while they are abundant.

There are more than 200 varieties of cherries, some being sweet, some being sour, some being a bright scarlet and some being so dark they are almost black. With such a variety from which to choose, it is easy to find the right type for your taste.

Cherries are chiefly water, although they provide a natural sugar, food minerals such as calcium and iron, and a small amount of protein. Due to their acid, they are classed with the subacid fruits.

With cherries coming into season, promise yourself the treat of using them. Try them for lunch and see how you are repaid at dinner time by your increased appetite for other foods.

REFRIGERATION BY ELECTRICITY GAINS WIDE POPULARITY

A good refrigerator has become a necessity in almost every Canadian home and the big swing of late years has been to the electric refrigerator. There is a size and style for almost every home and every pocket book and the cost of operation is really low when compared to the service received.

The new 1939 models are especially designed to meet the requirements of large families and specially designed meat keepers and crispers for the keeping of fresh green vegetables are really appreciated by every housewife who has experienced the loss and waste of food when trying to keep it without refrigeration.

The fast freezing chamber in every electric refrigerator is one of the finest features of these machines. It enables the housewife to crisp up salads or fruits in short order and gives her a constant supply of fresh ice cubes at a moment's notice.

Electric Ironer Saves Time, Work At No Extra Cost

The electric ironer is gaining favor rapidly with women who know the drudgery of standing on their feet for hours at a time doing the family ironing.

This modern electrical servant while not new has been reduced in price to where it is no longer out of reach of the ordinary family. And the new ironer costs just about the same amount as the old hand iron to operate.

The housewife sits down to do the family ironing with the electric ironer and the whole job is done in less than half the time it took with the old fashioned method. Every woman owes it to herself to at least investigate the merits of this new electrical helper.

Electric Ranges Cook Better and More Tasty Meals

The modern electric range is a boon to the housewife. It is the cleanest cooking machine ever built. With an electric range there is no soot, no smoke and they are absolutely safe, even for children to operate.

The initial cost of the average electric range is higher than other types of stoves, but they are much more economical owing to the non-shrinkage of roasts and other dishes that ordinarily show a heavy shrinkage in the ordinary range.

Automatic appliances can be attached to almost any electric range and with the adjusting of these automatic timing features a whole meal can be placed in the oven and when it is fully cooked the range will be automatically shut off and during the cooking of the meal the heat is automatically controlled.

The installation of a modern range in any kitchen means less work and more leisure for the housewife at no extra cost.

Electric Washer Saves Time, Work Money and Health

There are three ways in do the family washing: pay the laundry to do it; pay a servant to do it, or do it yourself. The last has been the method of doing the family washing for generations, but today the housewife doesn't have to scrub and rub over an old fashioned washboard as her grandmother did.

The modern electric washer has taken all the worry and work out of washing. And it not only saves work and health but the cost is so little for the operation of the washer that it is hardly worth mentioning. And your clothes will undoubtedly receive more careful treatment at home than they would in a public laundry and they will certainly give you more wear than when submitted to a weekly scrubbing on an old fashioned washboard.

The newer electric washers have dryers attached to them that turn the clothes out all ready for the iron. And if your home is equipped with an electric ironer, you have the de luxe laundry equipment.

75,000 Greet Her Majesty Saturday

OTTAWA, May 20—Queen Elizabeth was given a tremendous ovation by the 75,000 persons jammed around Parliament Hill when she appeared at a window in the governor-general's apartment today to watch the changing of the colors from that vantage point in the east block.

Some time in advance of the arrival of His Majesty, the Queen and Lady Tweedsmuir entered quietly through the east gate but did not escape the excited thousands who stood at that corner of Parliament Square.

Cheers followed Her Majesty into the east block but when she appeared at the opened window of the governor-general's office to take the seat assigned her the applause was so long and deafening that if was several minutes before she could ask down. Then she left viewing and rose and wave several times in response to the clamorous demands and cheers.

The Queen wore a hyacinth blue ensemble with a corsage of hyacinths, high-heeled, off-the-face blue hat, pearls, grey gloves and shoes, and plain matching envelope bag. She also wore a smoky blue fox scarf.

Brilliant Gowns of Women Lend Color and Charm To Ottawa State Dinner

OTTAWA, May 20.—Victorian picture frock of delicate rose tulle was the Queen's choice from her extensive tour wardrobe when Their Majesties attended the state dinner at Government House Friday night. The King wore the navy and gold braid of an admiral of the fleet. The Queen drew the admiration of fashionable Ottawa for her tasteful gown. Fine gold and silver threads were woven in an allover pattern, and it was re-embroidered with Alexander roses in tones of pink, gold, silver and blue.

Diagonally across the bosom hung the blue ribbon of the Order of the Garter, her jewels were a diamond necklace, diamond tiara and bracelet.

FIRST LADY'S GOWN

Lady Tweedsmuir's gown was of silver and white lame with a swathed bodice and long scarf reaching to the end of the slight train of her model gown. Her tiara and necklace were of diamonds. Lady Campbell, wife of the British high commissioner, wore a model evening frock of deep purple net with touches of shell pink at the corsage. Diamond earrings and a pearl necklet were added touches.

Mrs. D. de Waal Meyer, wife of the South African accredited representative, was gowned in a picture frock of pale blue sheer with beaded bodice.

Flowers in lilac tones were applied on the white organza gown worn by the Countess de Dampierre, wife of the French minister. Her necklace was of emeralds.

GOLD LACE GOWN

Baroness Tomii, wife of the Japanese minister, wore gold lame cut on Empire lines, falling gracefully to the floor. While Belgian lace designed with extreme full skirt and exaggerated puffed sleeves and low decolletage, fashioned the gown worn by Mrs. Suzanne Silvercruys, sister of the Belgian minister to Canada.

Mrs. Peter Casgrain, wife of the speaker of the House of Commons, wore an imported model of white and silver lame, softly draped at the neckline and falling into a small train. Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the newly-appointed United States minister, chose a gown of white and silver lace with bouffant skirt.

GREY LACE

Grey lace cut on flowing lines formed the gown worn by Mrs. T. A. Crerar, wife of the mines and resources minister. Touches of green ribbon and diamond pendant completed her ensemble, while Mrs. C. G. Power, wife of the pensions minister, wore a picture frock in cyclamen pink with a fitted bodice of lace and a full skirt of tulle. An amethyst necklace completed her gown.

Pale pink taffeta in wintergarden style, the skirt splashed with bunches of purple grapes, was worn by Mrs. J. L. Ilsley, wife of the revenue minister.

Mrs. J. G. Gardiner, wife of the agriculture minister, was gowned in a severe model of white metallic threaded in gold. Gold sequins studded the bodice of the white crepe gown worn by Mrs. Norman Rogers, wife of the labor minister.

Mrs. Norman McLarty, wife of the postmaster general, wore a period model of black shadow lace over a full pink tulle skirt, wide coral earrings and necklace.

WHITE CHIFFON

White chiffon fashioned the gowns of Mrs. J. A. MacKinnon, of Edmonton, wife of the minister without portfolio. Brilliants dotted the bodice and the skirt fell in accordion pleats to the floor. Mrs. C. A. Dunning, wife of the finance minister, wore brocaded silver lame falling into a slight train. Mrs. J. D. Howe, wife of the transport minister, wore white satin, with panels of fine lace inset in the skirt.

QUEEN'S BLUE

Queen's blue chiffon with clusters of shaded beads embroidered on the full skirt and tight bodice, was worn by Mrs. J. E. Michaud, wife of the fisheries minister.

Mrs. W. E. Foster, wife of the speaker of the Senate, was gowned in Fuchsia crepe, cut on princess lines, the bodice outlined in crystal beads.

Kinney School Pupils To Be Seen In Revue

The ballet is one of the best known of dance mediums but one of the least known in Canada, and the part which has been the opening of the first Canadian ballet in eastern Canada. Edmontonians will have their chance to see the opening exhibition of this type of dancing on Saturday evening, May 27, when members of the Kinney School of Dancing are presented in their annual revue by the instructors of the school, Marian Kinney and Ruth Carse.

FOUR BALLETS

The ballet has been chosen by the school for most of its numbers, and the following ballets will be presented, the waltz, to the music of Johann Strauss, Valse Triste, Sebelius; Hungarian Rhapsody, to the music of Lizzt and the children's ballet, executed in period costume of the 19th century.

Soloists taking part in the forthcoming revue are Marian Kinney, Ruth Carse, Muriel Taylor, Joyce Toby and Marjorie Sedgwick. In the children's ballet, the following will have leading parts, Daurel Mills, Marguerite Kinney, Beryl Bisset and Colleen Rogers.

Long-Stemmed American Beauties

— By John Robert Powers —

A woman of experience at the age of twenty-three! That is the enviable record of Eleanor Prentiss. Born in Fort Dodge, Iowa, she attended the public school there and then went to Iowa State College. While at university she majored in physical education and won the A.A.U. fifty-yard free style swimming championship. Eleanor was selected by a group of prominent artists to represent a large soap company at the Chicago fair. Upon completing this assignment she went to Hollywood. Her first contract was purchased by a company producing western pictures and she was starred in two of these films. Her all around athletic prowess stood her in good stead. An excellent horsewoman, it was predicted that she would be the greatest female western star, but fate intervened again and she was chosen in a Los Angeles newspaper contest as the girl with the most beautiful face in California. This led to another motion picture contract and she appeared with Sonja Henie in "Thin Ice" and "Happy Landing." She has doubled for Frances Farmer and then appeared with Claudette Colbert in "I Met Him In Paris." She was also featured in a skiing picture made at Sun Valley.

Most ordinary people would have been contented with this rather meteoric rise in their affairs but not Eleanor. She wanted to become an actress and be known for her acting ability rather than her athletic qualities. In respect to this she says, "I put the cart before the horse and now I have to try and reverse it." Suiting the action to the desire she got a release from her contract to come to New York to study dramatic art and in addition to her modelling she attends classes at the Moscow Art Theatre three days a week. She has made a great deal of progress and now has a contract with a summer stock company for this season.

At the present time she feels that her great love is the theatre and until she has become a success on Broadway she will not return to the movies no matter how attractive the offer may be.

Eleanor came to our office with the same determination to be a success in this business that she has to be on the stage. She says that next to the stage she prefers modelling because she finds that it gives her a real chance to display her dramatic ability. Artists like her particularly because she is a great help to them in improvising interesting poses.

She is one of the few girls whom we didn't have to tell how to make up. She is natural in her appearance and knows the value of it. She has excellent posture and she thinks that these two things are more than half the battle. "Walk with chin up and shoulders back and people will notice you. Be slovenly and you are one of the mob." That is her advice to all women.

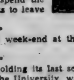
"Over The Teacups"— Twenty Years Ago

From the Files of The Edmonton Bulletin

A TEA will be held by All Saints' Junior W.A. at the home of Mrs. P. C. H. Primrose, 1726 98 avenue, on Tuesday from 3 to 6 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Greer with their two children, Helen and Billie, have gone to Penticton, B.C.

Mrs. A. G. Browning is leaving this week to spend the summer in the east.



Miss Jessie Huff entertained most delightfully at tea on Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Jessie Huckell's return to the city from the south where she spent over a year. The tea tables were prettily arranged with pink and white carnations, and Mrs. Huckell poured tea and Mrs. John Kelly cut the ices.

Mrs. W. O. Farquharson is planning to spend the summer vacation at Lac la Biche, and expects to leave the first of July.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Challand spent the week-end at their cottage at Seba.

The Edmonton Women's Press Club is holding its last soiree of the season tonight, when Dean E. A. Howes of the University, will be guest of honor.

Captain and Mrs. Lefroy and baby arrived in Quebec on Saturday.

Mrs. Fred Smith left on Sunday night last for the east to attend a meeting of the National Chapter I.O.D.E., in Montreal.

Mrs. O. J. Rowe left on Monday for a holiday in Minneapolis and Chicago.

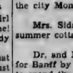
MISS JUDY PACE and Miss Pauline Martin expect to leave next week for the east to take a course in vocational training in Toronto. Mrs. W. J. Pace expects to leave shortly for Kenora to visit her married daughter, and will accompany her daughter Miss Judy, that far on her journey.

Mrs. E. W. Bowness is expected in the city shortly from the south, where she has been visiting since last fall.

Dr. and Mrs. H. Marshall Tory are expected to return from overseas in July or August.

Mrs. Harry Gowan is visiting in the country for a while, hoping it will benefit her health.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Sutherland returned from New York on Sunday morning.



Mrs. J. Pateman and daughter, Mrs. Harry Reichelt, are leaving on Thursday for their cottage at Moonlight Bay, Lake Wabamun, to open it for the summer.

Mrs. Billy Bradburn and two sons, Bob and Eric, are planning to go to Calgary to meet Captain Bradburn when he arrives here with the 31st.

Mrs. Norman Harvey left Sunday to spend the summer in Toronto. She was accompanied as far as Calgary by Mr. Harvey, who returned to the city Monday night.

Mrs. Sidney B. Woods and family are planning to leave for their summer cottage at Bowen Island, B.C., about the first of June.

Dr. and Mrs. P. Quesnel and small daughter Babs, left on Thursday for Banff by motor and were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smails, to spend the week-end and holiday.

The Life of the Party If You Can Tap Dance

Learn to Tap in Home Lessons

A big hand at parties for the girl who knows a clever tap routine! "How does she do it?" Everybody asks.

But those tricky numbers that win such "oh's" and "ah's" are just combinations of easy basic steps that you can teach yourself. Instructions, diagrams tell you how to use your feet, fit your taps to music—as our picture shows.

See how easily you can do the three-tap combination that's illustrated. Hum a favorite waltz tune, time your taps to the three distinct beats in each measure.

1. Step on left foot.
2. Brush ball of right foot forward, grazing the floor with a clear tap sound.
3. Hop on left foot.

In no time you pick up other basic taps—and have grand fun trying combinations, making up your own. And in party, show routines, you really go to town! Snap your fingers, clap your hands—the crowd will love your swingy style.

Add to your good times! Our 32-page booklet has diagrams, directions for all the basic taps. Shows how to combine them in gay routines—waltz, military, buck—for parties, club shows.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Tap Dancing Simplified" to The Edmonton Bulletin, Home Service, Edmonton, Alberta. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of the booklet.

Dirty or inferior wax may be removed from wood floors with a clean cloth saturated with turpentine. Always, of course, keep windows open while working with turpentine and observe all precautions against fire danger.

DOROTHY DIX Says:

Dear Miss Dix—Very few men offer to give up their seats to young girls or women while riding in a crowded bus or street car. I myself will only give up my seat to a sick or crippled person, or to an elderly man and woman, or to a woman with a baby in her arms. The reason for my attitude is that women of today consider themselves equal to men. They drink, smoke, show off their bodies just to see if they can make a man fall for them. I consider this vulgar and have lost respect for the modern woman. Years ago, when women acted modestly, they commanded the respect of man. Am I wrong in my ideas? L. T.

Answer:

Even a woman can't have her cake and eat it, too, and undoubtedly when women fought for and achieved their rights they forfeited their privileges.

The tradition that a man should give his seat to a woman in a crowded car was based on the theory that man was stronger than woman and hence better able to stand than the frail, delicate little creature who was about to swoon with fatigue after having undergone the arduous labor of going to a matinee and partaking of an ice cream soda.

But nowadays, when girls are as husky as their brothers, when they think nothing of tramping around golf links for hours at a time, and when their chests are covered with medals for high jumping and skiing and sailing and all sorts of athletic sports, they are certainly able to stand on their own feet, physically as well as metaphorically, and I see no reason why a tired man should give up his seat to one of them.

Old-fashioned chivalry died out when women entered into competition with men in business and the professions. Parlor manners are absurd in a business office. The man who works at a desk next to a girl can't be hopping up every time she moves, or pulling out her chair for her, or sharpening her lead pencils and doing the work she leaves undone.

But, it seems to me, the men who give women an equal chance to make a living are showing them the finest chivalry the world has ever known. It means something a lot more than picking up a lady's handkerchief, or giving her a seat in a car.

DOROTHY DIX.

Heart-To-Heart Talks ---- By Kathleen Norris

Are American Husbands Getting a Fair Break?

At the slightest criticism of her actions my wife laughs and says, "Well, get a divorce and give me Barbara." Barbara is our little daughter.

IT IS astonishing to discover how few men are the masters of their own homes. If a woman is a good woman, a fine cook, manager and mother, he has a happy home. If she isn't, the husband is just out of luck. He really has very little to do with the matter.

In fact, Bertrand Russell, distinguished member of a distinguished British family, holds that the father of a family in these days is just a playmate for the children. He has nothing to do with their manners, morals, education, clothing, feeding. He does, if he is a loving father, take them out occasionally to movies or the circus, and he does sometimes comment on their school rating. And there he stops.

In the old days, say two hundred years ago, woman was chattel! She was one of her husband's possessions; she was obliged to conform to a strict and difficult standard; he owed her nothing at all. If he had extra-marital relationships she took the offspring of these affairs into her heart and home and loved them as her own. She bore many children, without anesthetics or competent nursing. In one case a woman had three children too quickly, and lost her mind. She was put in an asylum, fished out again, and had five more. Three of them died and then the mother died. The father then married the governess who had three children in four years and was expecting a fourth when a daughter of the first poor, insane mother brought the family into lasting fame by killing a younger half-brother. This girl had brooded bitterly over her mother's suffering and death and resented the presence of the governess who took her mother's place. Insane or not, and only seventeen, she was condemned to death, but Queen Victoria commuted this to life imprisonment, and everyone pitied the father!

Husbands could whip wives with a stick "no thicker than their fingers" in times still within the memory of living persons, and children could be beaten, shut up, sent away, even willed away to strangers with no murmur from mother. Wives asked for a little pocket-money; the man of the house did all the marketing, all the hiring and firing of servants; he made all the decisions.

THE GIRLS GOT NOTHING

Elizabeth Barrett's delightful father, having apparently enjoyed marital comfort to the full, for he had ten children, forbad his children marriage on any terms. They were never to mention it, and when on one occasion a son did, he moved the whole crowd out into the lonely country. Property went only to males, and if there were one brother and six sisters the girls had only what he chose to give them. Twenty years ago I visited an American girl in a lovely English home with park, lake, swans, lodge. It was like a chapter of Little Lord Fauntleroy. But she had borne six girls in nine years in the hope of being able to hold on to this place, and in the following year had another girl, and then, just as they changed this iniquitous law of primogeniture, she had a boy. "And I hate children," she said wearily.

Well, that has all passed like a dream, and we live in another day. But when a man writes me a letter like this one from "D. D." I wonder why men don't claim a small percentage of that old dominion and keep the scales somewhere nearer balance at least. This is part of the letter:

"My wife is twenty-eight, a beautiful girl; we have been married seven years. Joan never was trained for housekeeping, but for awhile her mistakes seemed only a joke. She had been a clerk in our office and comes from a very plain home, but she now runs with a pretty extravagant set. We entertain on a scale far beyond my means and are always in debt. My mother wanted to give me a car, but I had to tell her that unless I had at least a thousand dollars I could not start the new year. In my job as a clerk in an enormous English insurance company that reaches around the world, a very strict watch is kept upon our personal affairs; I cannot get Joan to see this; she will not even listen to me when I discuss it. At the slightest criticism she will laugh and say, 'Well, get a divorce then, and give me Barbara!' Barbara is our little girl, four years old, and I could not bear to part with her. I don't think Joan really means that she would leave me. Her people could not help her and she would have to work again. But I don't dare risk it.

"I ought to say that during our year's engagement Joan did not seem at all what she has since turned out to be. My life is now all confusion and pain, and I confess I cannot see my way out. I will not be raised or promoted while this goes on, but it breaks my heart to think of losing my home, my wife and my baby girl. Have you had similar problems to solve and can you help me?"

SHE'LL HAVE TO PAY

The answer to "D. D." is really an answer to Joan. She is behaving badly, and, although having her own way, and triumphing over the helplessness of her husband may seem exciting to her now, she will pay for it later on.

There ought to be a standard of behavior in marriage marked like a map or a graph. It might check a woman like Joan to discover that she rated about twenty-two per cent. It might affect her friend's opinion of her, too. I fought a good fight for women's suffrage twenty years ago and I would fight it again; it is not fair that one sex should completely control the other and make laws for it.

But neither is it fair that the pendulum should swing so far in the other direction that a man should have no recourse except divorce or ruin because he marries an untrained wife. The success of a marriage depends far more upon a wife than on a husband. And the pernicious habit that many young wives have, of gathering together and comparing notes and pitying each other and discussing the faults of their respective husbands is one of the hot-beds that forces divorces into existence. These little groups of women-chums grow entirely independent of home responsibilities. The newspapers of the world recently reported the details of one such association. Three young pretty wives got tired of their own company, so they asked three idle young men to join them for afternoon jaunts. A husband, seeing his wife coolly having cocktails apparently alone with a man quite late one night in a disreputable night club, went home for a gun, found a sick child alone and wailing, got his gun and shot his wife's boy friend. It then appeared that four other persons had been in the party, which was quite "innocent," according to them, and he got a life term and the dear little wife got a divorce.

No one wants to go back to the old bullying days when the "Master" was really the master. Those were bad days, too. But women are much more stupid than I think they are, if they allow this sort of thing to go on.

Skilled Menu Composer Makes Culinary Music

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

There are more good cooks than there are good menu makers. Let's do something about it, and begin to learn the important art of combining dishes into balanced and self-sustaining menus.

VEAL PROVENCAL

(Serves 4 to 6)

One veal cutlet cut ¾ inch thick, ¼ pound fresh or canned mushrooms, sliced, small piece garlic, 2 large tomatoes, ½ cup white wine or white grape juice, butter, flour, parsley, salt and pepper.

Pound cutlets to make extra tender. Dip in flour seasoned with salt and pepper. Heat butter in pan and cook cutlets until browned on both sides and tender. In another pan, simmer mushrooms and garlic. Add peeled and diced tomatoes. Season with salt, pepper and celery salt. Simmer another 20 minutes, then add wine or white grape juice, and a little minced parsley.

Arrange browned and tender cutlets on hot platter. Pour the tomato-mushroom mixture over cutlets. Garnish with watercress.

SPICE CAKE RING

Three eggs, ⅔ cup sugar, 1 cup pastry flour, 1 teaspoon grated bitter chocolate, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon soda, ¼ cup boiling water.

Dissolve soda in boiling water. Beat egg yolks until light, add sugar gradually and beat, then add water and soda. Sift flour and spices three times, then add to other mixture with grated chocolate and beat hard. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Bake in floured and buttered ring mold in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 30 minutes, then cool and unmold. Fill center with frozen applesauce.

FROZEN APPLESAUCE

Two cups unsweetened applesauce, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1-3 cup orange marmalade, 1 cup cream, whipped.

Combine and freeze to mush in freezing tray of mechanical refrigerator or in freezer.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Rhubarb, rice muffins, crisp bacon, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Codfish cakes, Boston brown bread, mixed green salad, strawberries and cream, cookies, tea, milk.

DINNER: Glorified chicken soup, veal provencal, fried okra rings, scalloped potatoes with leeks, frozen applesauce in spice cake ring, coffee, milk.

Keep Your Beauty Out Of Dull Ruts

By ALICIA HART

Letting yourself get into a rut as far as your appearance is concerned is a pretty bad idea, of course. But refusing to get out of such a rut, once you realize you are in it, may mean one of two things. Either you are like the rank egoist who dares to think that her personality is so attractive that it doesn't mater how she looks, or you haven't learned to budget your time sensibly to allow a few minutes a day for physical self-improvement!

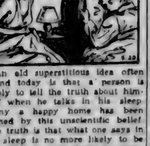
Do you wear the same colors year after year? Or do you manage to include in your wardrobe each season one dress in a shade you haven't been seen in for two or three years? If, for practical reasons, you stick to black in the winter and navy in summer, remember that it's possible, by choosing accessories adroitly, to make even black and navy look pretty exciting.

MAKEUP OF YOUTH DOESN'T WORK NOW

If you have worn your hair the same way for more years than you, or anyone else, can remember, you probably aren't making the most of yourself. If you are using the same shades of makeup that you used fifteen years ago, the chances are that they are doing little, if anything, for you. Skin tones invariably darken as one grows older. The powder that was flattering at 20 is seldom becoming now that you are thirty-five.

What about your hats? Do you refuse to try a new shape and style occasionally? And your stockings? Have you looked at any new shades this season? You certainly should. It's a good idea to stick to things which are absolutely satisfactory. But don't overdo the idea. Don't confuse loyalty with letting yourself slip into a rut.

Debunker



An old superstitious idea often found today is that a person is likely to tell the truth about himself when he talks in his sleep. Many a happy home has been ruined by this unscientific belief. The truth is that what one says in his sleep is no more likely to be true than are the things a person dreams. They do not represent either facts or desires. In spite of this courts have been known to admit testimony against accused persons, based on talking in their sleep.

To remove the lime deposit which gradually forms on the inside of a tea kettle, boil in it a solution of water and plain borax.

Raising A Family

Right under the top soil of this big earth there lies a layer of oddments that must tickle the skin of Mother Earth. Buried treasure that even the tiny pirates themselves have long forgotten. You planted some of it, so have I. And long ago we both forgot that someone was accused of stealing when the real culprit was busily eating his oatmeal in perfect innocence or sleeping the sleep of the just.

O. R. Barton

Memory is a short thing with a little child. Yesterday was last week and last week was yesterday. Tomorrow is something that never comes.

Like most other puzzling problems of little children, this one bothers young mothers to distraction. Jimmy is going to be a sneak and a thief, she thinks, and her heart sinks with shame. He can't even tell the truth when he's found out.

SECRETIVENESS IS PART OF GROWING UP

Of course, there is such a thing as example. If a child sees an older child deliberately hide something, then he too may hide a clue to mischief to keep from being discovered.

However, seldom does a very small child "steal" and hide things. He simply loves to have a secret to himself that no one else knows, not even his mother.

It belongs with other traits of this period, constantly surprising the child with his growing importance as a person. He is doing a lot of experimenting to prove that he is independent, alone in his thinking.

Maybe he will take mother into his confidence and whisper nothings in her ear. He will say, "Now don't you tell." Between them now they know that baby drank all her milk. He can't invent much, so he makes a secret of the obvious. Sometimes he hides himself.

At this age they talk to themselves a lot. Ask them what it is and they will say, "I don't tell," or "It's a secret," or "I'll tell Sport."

BALANCED ASH TRAY

Are you an ash-tray tipper-over? If you are, you'll be glad to know there's a new little receiver that you can park safely on the arm of your chair, or even your knee, and not give it another thought. This ingenious little gadget is merely a small bronzed metal tray fitted with a U-shaped cigarette cross-piece and fastened to a small suede pouch loaded with buckshot. It's the buckshot in the pouch that balances it so neatly and gives it its non-slippable quality.

Remedies

THE dreamy air of summer, with the drowsy hum of bees! That sounds like the beginning of a poem.

Indeed, on a morning like this, with tins swimming in long circles on their way to and from their nests, skylarks singing above the tulip fields, it would be easy to grow lyrical. But my mind is set in another mould.

The contrast between Nature's abundance and man's parsimony grows more intolerable every day. God has made generous provision for every creature, but they are not getting it. The world is divided three ways. At the two extremes are the over-stuffed and the under-fed. I am not concerned with those who have too much. I do not begrudge it to them. I hope they find pleasure in their abundance, and are able to share it joyfully with others as many of them do. But the underfed — the outcasts, the people who are denied work, especially the young and eager, should be so constantly in our thoughts that, in self defence, we would find a solution for unemployment.

For there is one. It is not a calamity—an Act of God about which we can do nothing. It is not an earthquake, flood or famine. I see the remedy all about me.

Canada is a great, beautiful, but unfinished country. There are roads to be built, parks to be laid out, forests to be replanted; tourists to be attracted, and then fed and housed. We have a situation of unparalleled advantage. We have beside us a great people who love to travel. Americans are not great linguists so they prefer to travel in a country where their language is spoken.

When summer comes down with its blistering heat, their thoughts turn northward. We have the cool shade, the piney odors, the deep blue lakes they love, and the cool and quiet nights.

SUITE ROADS

They do come to us even as we are, and when we think of the perfect highway they leave when they cross the boundary, and the narrow rutty roads they find in Canada, we know they have grounds for complaint.

Tourists bring real money, and they bring more than money, they bring prospective settlers, and industries. Every satisfied tourist becomes an advance agent for more tourists.

We all know this, and have bill boards spread over the United States from the Mexican border, urging the travellers to "Visit the Birds to Victoria," and see the Canadian Rockies, but we do very little in comparison with what we might do to get them to come again.

The C.C.C. in the United States have been doing a great work in reforestation, and in the prevention of forest fires. Their camps have been established in the most beautiful parts of the country, and the young men were paid wages too, not merely a sustenance allowance. We could do the same, and so have something to show for the huge amounts we have spent, and are spending to relieve unemployment.

In 1937, the State of Wyoming, which has just half the population of British Columbia, received fourteen million dollars from tourists.

Putting men on a dole works a great injury to them. It makes them into inflammable material, ready to be kindled by the arguments of the agitator. The man who has a job which pays him a living wage and gives him hope for the future, does not listen to subversive doctrine. There is only one remedy for Communism, and that is it. Not padlocks, prisons, deportation. These are lazy, selfish, short-sighted answers, which feed the thing they are intended to destroy.

SAVE TREES

Canada has another field in which many people could be put to work, and that is the preservation of our forests. We are allowing this valuable asset to be destroyed by lumbering, which destroys the young timber. Already we have great denuded sections, stripped of trees, pathetic examples of our own carelessness. "High-lead" logging should never have been allowed. Everyone denounces it, but it goes on. It is like the exporting of war materials to Japan. No one can defend it—but it goes on. It is not enough to say, we have plenty of timber lands—more than we will ever use in our time. That may be so—but we hold these possessions in trust for the future.

MAN'S CARELESSNESS

The destruction of our forests has disastrous effects, beyond the loss of timber. The denuded hillsides cannot hold the moisture which feeds the rivers, and streams go dry in the summer. I have travelled through the blackened country and seen their dead fish lying in the dry river channels, mute evidence of man's carelessness. A burnt forest offers no sanctuary for beast or bird, and offends the eye of the traveller. Flood hazard caused by the rapid run-off in the spring, or following a heavy rain, is another aspect of the destruction of the timber lands.

Prosperity is not just around the corner. It will not suddenly burst in on us, nor fall upon us like manna from heaven. But if we can look far enough ahead, and if we should not strain anyone's eyes to do this, we can see that we must have a definite program of road building, reforestation, tree planting on the highways, preservation of wild life, water conservation, such as has been going on in the dried out parts of Western Canada, establishment of Youth Camps where education and work and recreation are combined, a co-operative housing plan such as may be seen in Nova Scotia under the direction of Father Tompkins—the list is almost endless.

INSPIRE CONFIDENCE

We can inspire confidence, if we put our people tactfully to work. We can make Canada a land of beauty and prosperity. We need a new spirit, wherein people and governments will take responsibility, instead of spending their energy and cleverness in dodging it. These things I have mentioned are not vaporous dreams. They are real and practical and have been demonstrated elsewhere.

If our people were happily employed and loosed from the fear of want, they would look and feel better physically as well as mentally. Canada spends three hundred million dollars a year on ill health, which is a staggering sum, and might be materially reduced by better living conditions, better food, more fresh air, and constructive thinking.

In New York City, more than 8,000 couples take out marriage licenses annually and never use them.

Fly the Flag Right Side

No flag in the world is flown upside down more often than the Union Jack. Edmonton home-owners who plan to display the King's colors for the Royal Visit are urged to observe the following simple rule: the broad, white diagonal stripe should be uppermost in the top corner next to the mast or flagpole. Careful scrutiny of the above diagram will reveal that the white bands of St. Andrew's cross which border the diagonal red St. Patrick's cross are not of the same width. When the narrow white band is uppermost against the pole the flag is upside down and becomes a signal of distress.

GREAT BOOKS IN BRIEF

By ELIZABETH COATESWORTH JAMES

Romeo and Juliet

By EDWARD NOYES WESTCOTT

FOR generations two families of Verona, the houses of Montagu and Capulet, have been at feud. Despite the orders of the Prince, street fighting continues, even among the servants.

Romeo, a Montagu, secretly loves Juliet, though at first he does not knew her name. One evening Romeo with his friends attends a masqued ball at the villa of his enemy. There he and Juliet learn the identity of each other. Meanwhile Juliet's father has summoned Paris, a noble kinsman, and has made a marriage contract for Juliet.

After the masquerade, Romeo climbs the wall that surrounds the Capulet estate and looks toward Juliet's apartment. He does not wait long. Juliet cannot sleep, for she is unable to forget his ardent glances, she comes onto the balcony. Romeo declares his love and swears to fulfill it, even if they must marry secretly and flee from the wrath of their families. This famous balcony scene is lovely because it is most winning, revealing her love for Romeo and wondering if she is unladylike to be so honest. They plan to go to the cell of Friar Laurence and be married.

The street is in riot. A nobleman of each house lies dead. The Prince of Verona comes, hears the case, and banishes Romeo from the state forever. Juliet's extreme grief is interpreted as being for her cousin, Mercutio.

Capulet arranges with Paris for Juliet's wedding to be in two days. While this plan is taking form, Juliet is in her apartment, frantic for Romeo, whom she has married to lose.

But Romeo is not to be so easily defeated. Disobeying the time limit for banishment, he again climbs the wall and finds Juliet in tears for him. Dawn finds them on the balcony. Their farewell is prolonged, for Juliet feels impending evil and she calls her husband back to her again and again.

On the morning of the intended wedding, a servant finds Juliet as one dead. Joy turns to grief in the Capulet villa. Beautifully gowned, Juliet is laid in the vault.

The monk carrying the message to Romeo is quarantined because of a plague. Learning of this, Friar Laurence rushes to the tomb to be with her when Juliet shall awaken. Meanwhile word has come to Romeo that Juliet is dead. Without pity for himself, he sets out for her tomb.

At night Romeo reaches the gloomy place. There stands Paris, who also had loved Juliet. He challenges Romeo and they fight until Paris is killed. Romeo looks upon the face of his wife, noting how beautiful she is, even in death. He kisses her, drinks the poison, then lying beside her, he dies.

Desperate since his plans went awry, the friar arrives and is overwhelmed at the sight. Reaching Juliet, he kneels beside her as she wakes and asks for Romeo. One frightened glance reveals to her the whole story. Using her husband's dagger, she kills herself.

Capulet and Montagu are summoned. Together they look upon the victims of their stubborn pride. In tears they forgive each other, each vowing to make a statue of gold in memory of the other's child. Shakespeare ends the play with this touch of irony.

KING, QUEEN WILL APPEAR ON BALCONY

OTTAWA, May 20—The King and Queen will make a brief appearance tonight at 7.35 on the balcony of the Chateau Laurier facing Confederation Square and the national war memorial, it was learned this morning. This will be just before they enter the banquet chamber for the parliamentary dinner at which Prime Minister Mackenzie King will be host and some 800 guests will attend.

Accidental Death Verdict In Calgary On Girl, 5, Killed

CALGARY, May 20—Verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury Thursday at an inquest into the death of Vida Scoloviz, 5, killed Tuesday when run over by a truck driven by Walter Kliss, Calgary, who is charged with manslaughter in the tragedy.

The verdict in part said: "From evidence adduced it is the opinion of the jury that the deceased ran into the side of truck, license number T-728, driven by Walter Kliss, and was accidentally killed."

HUNDREDS QUIT VERDE ISLAND: PLACE SINKING

Series Of Earth Shocks Frighten the Population Near Manila

MANILA, May 20.—Several hundred persons fled Verde Island, 100 miles south of Manila, today when a portion of the island began settling after a series of earth shocks.

Others of the island's 4,000 population were reported preparing to evacuate.

Refugees who crossed the 10-mile channel to Batangas provinces said quakes, frequent the past two weeks, became more numerous Thursday and rocks tumbled down hills and fissures opened in the ground but there was no evidence the entire island was sinking.

Rev. Miguel Selga, director of the weather bureau, said he did not consider the situation serious. He explained sinking of one section of the island probably was due to the underlying strata of limestone disintegrating in sea water. The island is about nine miles square.

WINGS NORTH

Hitler and Mussolini may not have met with much success in their recent moves, but the war scare resulting from their drumbeating and chest-thumping has kicked the bottom out from under the mining development in the Northwest Territories, at least temporarily.

According to persons who have been trying to raise money to finance further exploration and development of promising properties, individuals or companies willing to invest any money in northern mines at the present time are as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth.

One man, who has control of promising property which has been tested and proved, and who has spent the past six weeks making the rounds of the financial houses and investors of the west, has a particularly bitter outlook. "Everybody starts in their refusal with the phrase: 'Well, with the present unsettled international condition I'm not . . .'" he said.

"If Hitler and Mussolini can just keep things in a mix-up for another year, this country will be broke. How can you get men to work when you can't get money to do development work?" the pessimist wanted to know.

The facts seem to show that he is right. It is reported that at least eight concerns which had planned extensive development in the Yellowknife area this summer are waiting for international conditions to improve before beginning.

This hitch has resulted in loss of jobs for 300 men who would have been given work had the development been proceeded with.

Reports from the north are that there are already more than 100 unemployed men in Yellowknife alone, who have not even a prospect of obtaining work this season unless the outlook improves.

Two gold bricks, valued at about $30,000 each, were shipped east to the Royal Mines Limited, Toronto, on Friday. They were brought from the company's mine at Yellowknife.

CALGARY MAN DRAWS TICKET ON BLUE PETER

CALGARY, May 20.—T. McDowall, 67, of Calgary, who used a few mystic words for a nom-de-plume on his Irish sweepstakes ticket, drew Blue Peter, favorite in the English Derby to be run at Epsom May 24 when the draw took place at Dublin Friday.

His ticket, signed "Fum El Ba," number QL-28581, will be worth $140,000 if Blue Peter wins the classic and Blue Peter fails to place in the first three finishers, or is scratched, McDowall will collect $1,857.

The ticket holder is a Great War veteran and a bank messenger here.

French Papers Point To Canada As World Example

PARIS, May 20—The French press Friday pointed to the manner in which French and English-speaking Canadians live together as an example to the whole world.

The comment was based on the reception given the King and Queen by their Canadian subjects during their tour.

"Collaboration (independent) and the royal visit "furnished the occasion for noting how excessive are the real frontiers on which Nazi policy is founded."

Highway Opened

CALGARY, May 20—The Windermere highway from Castle Mountain, Alta, to Radium, B.C., south of Banff on the eastern side of the Rockies was opened Friday, said Alberta Motor Association officials.

Royalty Visit Is Boon To Steeplejack Trade: Flagpoles Get Painting

By MAC STEELE

Plans being laid in preparation for the Royal Visit are causing a big boom in the steeplejacking business. Hundreds of flagpoles in the city have to be given fresh coats of paint and, almost every day, citizens may see dare-devil pole painters clinging to swaying masts atop high buildings in the central section of the city.

George German and Marvin Harmon, local steeplejacks, have painted over 70 flagpoles during the last three weeks and their work is not nearly completed. While they paint nearly every flagpole in the city on an average of once every three years, this spring has been the busiest season of their 17 years in the game.

"Most ticklish job we've worked on this spring," says German, "was the 70-foot metal pole in front of the Memorial Hall." A high wind was blowing when they painted it and a almost any moment German, who climbed it, expected to feel the mast snap and send him plunging to the turf below.

80-FOOT

The steeplejacks say that the farthest they will get away from the earth via the flagpole route is when they shinny up the 60-footer on the Marshall-Wells building.

Although their work may seem precarious to the awed observer, the men laugh at the thought. The only accident they have had happened when one of them fell off a ladder. Neither one has even fallen from a pole, smokestack or water tower.

Insurance companies, however, will have nothing to do with steeplejacks. They can't get insurance at any price.

SMOKESTACKS

Most difficult and hazardous of their chores is painting smoke stacks. It bothers them a little when they go to work on the huge stacks. They say that the big chimneys sometimes have a four-foot sway when the breeze is right. Getting to the "working" boatswain's chair on the stack is not the easiest part of a smoke stack job, either, so they claim.

One of the most annoying experiences a steeplejack can have is to work with a cloud of little black flies swooping over his head and settling on the pole to be permanently plastered on to it. German had just such an experience when working on the government grain elevator at Calder.

In spite of the danger attached to the work, neither of the men would give it up for any other line of endeavor. They think there is no easier way of making a living. Most citizens, however, would be prone to argue the point.

High Perch

Shown above, working his way down the flag pole on top of the T. Eaton Company Western Ltd. on 102 street, is George German, daring Edmonton steeplejack. Business is "tops" with him right now with hundreds of poles requiring fresh coats of paint in readiness for the Royal Visit.

COIN-OPERATED LETTER BOX IS NEW DEPARTURE

NEW YORK, May 20—A streamlined, coin-operated letter box designed to eliminate stamp-buying —and also to give your tongue a rest—has been placed in operation by United States postal authorities. First, three cents are deposited in the machine. Then the letter is inserted in a guided spot and by the twist of a dial is stamped and mailed.

On May 26, Dr. D. P. Pandia, will arrive here and will give a series of lectures at the Corona hotel, commencing on Sunday, May 28, under the auspices of the Canadian Federation of Theosophical Societies.

He is a B.A. of Baliol College, Oxford; a M.A. and Ph.D., of London University.

Dr. Pandia is a barrister-at-law of the Inner Temple, London and professor of philosophy of University College, Colombo. In 1931 he was secretary to Mahatma Gandhi at the round table conference.

The subjects of his lectures will be Mahatma Gandhi as I knew Him; Hindu Philosophy and Fundamental Religious Conceptions.

Dr. Pandia is speaking at the Kiwanis Club luncheon on May 29 and the Edmonton Bar Association luncheon on May 30.

OLD TIMERS WILL ATTEND CHURCH

Members of the Edmonton and Northern Alberta Pioneers and Old Timers association will attend St. Joseph's cathedral for their annual church service at 7.30 on Sunday.

Special sections of the cathedral will be set aside for the Old Timers and the service will be appropriate to the occasion.

J. A. McCool, secretary of the organization, reports that interest in the service is at a high point and the mark of 200 recorded for attendance last year probably will be exceeded on this occasion.

LUTHERANS PLAN JOINT SERVICE

Rev. R. Krisch, pastor of St. John's Lutheran church announced on Saturday that a joint Lutheran service would be held at the church at 7.30 p.m. on Sunday. This service will be sponsored by five Edmonton congregations, Ansgar, Central, First Swedish, St. John's and Trinity. Sermons will be given by Rev. C. S. Lysig and Rev. J. A. Vikman.

Special music will be given by the choir.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is: "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name." (Psalms 103:1).

One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, is "The divine mind maintains all identities, from a blade of grass to a star, as distinct and eternal. The questions are: What are God's identities? What is soul? Does life or soul exist in the thing formed?" (p. 70).

Recently constructed was a three-wheeled auto with an air-cooled engine.

FIRMS ASKED TIME OFF FOR ROYALTY VISIT

Employers Requested Give Staff Time To Get To Posts

Appeal was issued Saturday by P. W. Abbott, K.C., royal visit committee chairman, to city firms to let their employees who have volunteered for guard or line duty along the route of the royal progress to end work on June 2 "by one or two o'clock at the very latest."

Mr. Abbott also said that children are reported to be selling their free bleacher seats for 60 cents to adults. All seats are sold to adults at a flat charge of one dollar each.

"Any adult or non-school child purchasing tickets from children who have received free tickets, or from anyone acting as their agents, will be spending money uselessly, as well as being technically guilty of, and contributing to, a fraudulent act," said Mr. Abbott.

Special Flights For Royal Visit

Arrangements are being made by the three aviation firms serving the northland—Canadian Airways, Mackenzie Air Service, and Yukon Southern Air Transport—to make special flights to fly citizens from northern points to the city to view Their Majesties on royal visit day, June 2.

Officials of the companies stated that every opportunity will be afforded to northerners to fly to the city.

Yukon Southern plan to fly their Barkley-Grow airliner from points in the Peace River country to the city on the day before the royal visit.

The three planes which will be placed on view for inspection by Their Majesties are a Barkley-Grow on wheels, a Bellanca on skis, and a Norseman on floats.

They'll Be Busy People When Royalty Arrives

Here are the three men who will be in charge of details at the government's state dinner at the Macdonald hotel, Royal Visit day. Right is Charles Fox, maitre d'hotel; centre is Claude Finlay, manager; and left is E. A. Gabiadorf, chef.

So you're getting a bit excited about this Royal visit business, eh? Wonder how you're going to get the wife ready and the kids all washed and dressed and out to the parade? And how in the name of the four winds you're going to keep track of 'em when you do get there. And you think you have worries? Relax, friend, relax—and listen to the story of the three men in Edmonton who really have cause to worry. Those three are Claude Finlay, manager of the Macdonald hotel, Charles Fox, maitre d'hotel, and E. A. Gabiadorf head chef. For they are the persons who are responsible for all arrangements for the government dinner which is being held at the hotel on Royal Visit Day in honor of Their Majesties the King and Queen. Compared with their worries, Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public's problem of how to keep junior from wanting to go somewhere he can't for an entire afternoon pales into insignificance. Chef Gabiadorf is in charge of the kitchen and everything that comes out of it. With years of experience behind him in leading hotels in this country and in Europe he has cooked for many famous personages. But this is the highlight of his career and all his efforts and time is being turned toward the planning for the event. Maitre d'Hotel Charles Fox will be in charge of all arrangements in the dining room, and already his brow wrinkles as he ponders over the hundreds of little details which must be settled in advance if everything is to proceed with the necessary smoothness. He has a vast experience to draw on however. In 1919 he was in charge at the Fort Garry hotel in Winnipeg when the Duke of Devonshire and the Prince of Wales visited that city and were entertained at the hotel. He was in charge here when Baron Tweedsmuir visited Edmonton two years ago and his proudest possession is a gold tie pin presented to him by Tweedsmuir on that occasion. He was in charge too, of arrangements for the dinner given to Queen Marie of Rumania by Premier and Mrs. Bracken at government house in Manitoba in 1926. And over all, with the worries of everyone as well as his own is Mr Finlay, manager of the hotel. His is the final responsibility. For example one of his chief problems will be to arrange for the hotel to carry on its business with out interruption or inconvenience for the other guests and yet at the same time provide the necessary privacy for the Royal Visitors. All in all, it would be easier to take half a dozen Juniors to watch the procession than trade places with these three men.

RED CHEVRONS ON DUTY FOR ROYAL VISIT

Members Will Line Procession Route—Major R. C. Arthurs Is Marshal

Duties of members of the Red Chevron club during the parade attendant on the Royal visit on June 2, were outlined at a meeting of the club held in the Memorial hall Friday evening. The Red Chevron club has undertaken to line the streets to aid in guarding the safety of Their Majesties at two points during the parade. Major R. C. Arthurs will be the marshal in charge of the ex-servicemen.

Members of the Red Chevron club will meet in front of McDougall church at 2 p.m. on June 2, and will line up and march to Rice street, where they will report to Major Arthurs. They will then march to the Memorial hall, where massed colors of all ex-servicemen will be gathered.

MASSED COLORS

Members of the Red Chevron club will follow directly behind the massed colors, which will be preceded by the Legion drill team and the Legion band.

Following the massed colors, the Red Chevrons will march to the C.N.R. depot, where the massed colors, band and drill team will form a hollow square, while the ex-servicemen will begin lining both sides of the street from a point just west of the station, along 104 avenue to 101 street, along 101 street to Jasper avenue until the number of men is exhausted. The men will stand three paces apart.

The men will remain at their positions until the King and Queen have returned from Portage Ave. Following the return of the King and Queen, they will re-form and march down 102 avenue to 109 street, along 109 street to Victoria avenue. They will form ranks line up, both sides of Victoria avenue until the King and Queen arrive at the Macdonald hotel.

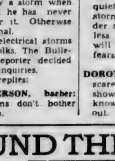
The Inquiring Reporter

The B. I. R. isn't scared of many things—much. But one thing that really makes him hang out the white flag and holler for help is a violent (it must be violent) thunderstorm accompanied by flashes of forked lightning.

If you ever want to get in touch with him — a n d don't seem to locate him anywhere else the first thing to do is to peer out the window and see if an electrical storm is raging. You'll be sure to find him huddled under the bed with his ears stuffed with cotton, a blindfold over his eyes and a black bag over his head. You may think him a sissy, but he can't help being that way. He was frightened by a storm when he was little and he has never quite gotten over it. Otherwise he is almost normal.



THUNDER STORM

Wondering if electrical storms bothered other folks. The Bulletin's Inquiring Reporter decided to make a few inquiries.

Here are the replies:

EDWARD ANDERSON, barber: No, thunderstorms don't bother me. But you do.

KATHLEEN JAMES, stenographer: They don't bother me. I rather like them. I know a number of persons who, just like you, run for cover the minute an electrical storm appears on the horizon, but they hold no terror for me. I guess I have a streak of bravery in me where thunderstorms are concerned.

LES BROWN, student: No. I can't say that I am particularly afraid of them. Naturally I am a little unnerved when the lightning seems to be bounding off the walk in front of me. But I'm a bit of a fatalist about being knocked off. When my time comes I'll go in spite of all the thunderstorms that may threaten me.

PERCY HALL, businessmen: No. I'm not scared, but my wife is and I'm a busy man trying to quieten her nerves when a big storm comes up. However, under my tutelage she is becoming less frightened and I think she will be completely cured of her fears in a couple of years.

DOROTHY ALLEN, clerk: They scare me a little, but I try not to show it. I suppose everyone will know it now that you've found out.

Sights High

Vivacious Miss Agnes Hooper, 12333 101 street, is preparing for the visit of Their Majesties on June 2 and is making sure that her petite stature will not interfere with her view. Holding a silk Union Jack in her hand, she practices sighting through a periscope which gives her an 18-inch optical lift to see over the head of any tall person who is so inconsiderate as to stand in her way.

AROUND THE TOWN

Ben Swanky, president of the Young Communist Club, will address a gathering of Edmonton Communists at a picnic planned for White Mud creek on May 25. Groups are asked to meet at the picnic grounds at 3 p.m.

Decree nisi of divorce was granted by Mr. Justice Ives in a sitting of the civil division of the supreme court here Friday to Emmanuel Baschak from Marie Baschak. Mr. Justice Shepherd granted decree nisi in action brought by Joseph W. Clement against Eva Clement.

Edmonton branch of the St. John's Ambulance Association on Thursday evening held a practice in which they carried patients down from the bleachers on Portage avenue, and generally familiarized themselves with the arrangements of the stands in preparation for the Royal Parade day. Rehearsal was directed by L. H. Nuthall, branch president.

Eleventh annual ploughing match sponsored by the South Edmonton District Agricultural Association will be held at the farm of Theodore Henkleman, three miles east and 1½ miles south of Edmonton South post office, on June 14. Ploughing contests will commence in the forenoon, and demonstrations by implement companies are to take place at 1 p.m. Following these contests will be resumed from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Competitions are open to all bona fide farmers and their employees in the province.

The annual President vs. Vice-President golf match, scheduled for the Country Club course Saturday afternoon, was cancelled due to unfavorable weather. Banquet to follow has also been postponed.

All chairmen of the various sub-committees are asked to attend the last general meeting of the Canadian League convention committee to be held at 8 p.m. in the Memorial hall Tuesday. The three-day provincial convention will open on May 31.

Terry Pin's Tips On

Hotels are where you meet people in lobbies.

In hotels are bell boys, ice water and free soap. Never stay at a bad hotel—the towels aren't even worth taking home.

Very modern hotels specialize in Service—carnations for the guests, free clothes pressing, theatre ticket service, and not enough blankets on the bed.

In a good, well-run hotel, the go-er-night guest receives a quiz from the desk clerk on the way in, and another as he checks out. That makes about $2.30 a smile.

What To Do

Friends of mine who were married more than a year ago have returned from an extended business trip and taken a house to live here permanently. I want to give them a surprise housewarming, but want to have it an unusual and novel affair. Can you give me a suggestion?

MRS. E. L. T.

Answer—Here is a surprise party that is a surprise all around—to the invited guests and to the returning friends. The guests will get their surprise when they receive your invitations, for this is the way they should read: To Mrs. G., who is noted for her Italian cookery—"You and a casserole of spaghetti are invited, etc., etc." To Miss D., who makes delicious angel cake—"You and a large angel cake, etc., etc." and so on. "You and a pound of butter" to a man; "You and a dozen rolls" to another man; "You and a jar of your spiced peaches" to some one else; "You and a dozen bottles of ginger ale" to a group of bachelors. The invitations start the fun, which is brought to a climax when all the guests and the good things assemble to surprise Mr. and Mrs. Just Returned. The same idea can be used in giving a shower to a bride-to-be and in any number of other exciting ways.

LINDBERGH IS TERMED TOOL OF SINISTER MEN

LONDON, May 20—David Lloyd George Friday described Charles Lindbergh as "a very amiable and attractive man who was the agent and tool of much more astute and sinister men than himself."

Referring to information on the strength of the Soviet Air Force which the American aviator was reported to have given British officials during the crisis last September, Mr. Lloyd George told the House of Commons:

"We shall never forget the Lindbergh episode. He went about from one member of parliament to another saying he had been in Russia. He was in Russia, I think, about a fortnight. He had not seen any of the great leaders of Russia, he could not have seen much of the air force, and he came back and told us the Russian army was no good, that Russian factories were in an awful mess.

"And there were many people who believed it—except Hitler."

Mr. Lloyd George reiterated his own opinion that Russia had "the finest air force in the world."

EXTRA LITTLE APPLAUSE FOR MAYOR HOUDE

By THOMAS WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

MONTREAL, May 20—Camillien Houde, mayor of Montreal, dipped into the Royal progress Thursday and annexed a spot of kudos.

Mayor Houde with Mme. Houde rode in the second carriage with the prime minister.

Mr. King retained his top hat and merely smiled to the crowds for it was the King's show and only Their Majesties might acknowledge the plaudits of the crowd.

Mr. Houde, however, removed his top hat and bowed and nodded and waved his hand, and now and then there was an extra little spirit of applause for him.

It was not etiquette but it was Houde.

Port Radium To Celebrate Royal Visit To Canada

PORT RADIUM, N.W.T., May 20—In this town on the edge of the Arctic circle, it had been planned to celebrate the Royal visit by a late running of the annual dog derby over Great Bear Lake. But nature spoiled the plans.

The unexpected early advent of spring has resulted in unseasonable warm weather and a break-up of the ice forcing cancellation of the race.

Fixed National Objective Needed Newspaperman Says

WINNIPEG, May 20—Canada will not attain national unity until it discovers a fixed national objective, whether that objective lies within the British Empire or outside it, maintained M. H. Nichols, managing director of The Vancouver Daily Province, in a service club address here Friday.

As part of the Empire, Canada was committed definitely to enter any war in which Great Britain was engaged, Mr. Nichols declared. The Dominion had the choice of staying in the Empire or moving out of it, but should not wait for a crisis to decide its stand.

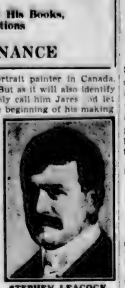
"To let the crisis break and then make preparations to meet it afterwards is a program of nation-all chaos and confusion," he said.

STEPHEN LEACOCK

Stories Here and There From His Books, Lectures and Conversations

THE MAGIC OF FINANCE

I HAVE an artist friend who is the best portrait painter in Canada. This will at once identify him to himself. But as it will also identify about a dozen others to themselves, I will simply call him Jares and let it go at that. Jares told me this story about the beginning of his making his fortune.



STEPHEN LEACOCK

The time came in his upward rise when he got several hundred dollars for each portrait, then passed into the thousands and presently got his first real order,—a commission to paint the portrait of a New York millionaire stock-broker for five thousand dollars.

The "sittings" in New York went along very pleasantly and satisfactorily. The millionaire stock-broker evidently took a fancy to the rising young genius.

When the last sitting came he said to the artist:

"Mr. Jares, I must see about having your cheque made out. But tell me first, what are you going to do now for the next two or three months?"

Jares said that he was going over to take a holiday in Brittany. "Good," said the broker, "I have a proposal to make. Suppose you leave this money with us and see what we can do with it while you're away. Mind," he added as a caution, "I don't say we're wizards you know; people get exaggerated ideas. But suppose you just leave it and see!"

Jares assented with delight.

He went away to Brittany, had a three month holiday and returned to New York.

He went round to the broker's office and sent in his card. The millionaire after a moment's hesitation recognized and received him most cordially.

"Mr. Jares," he said, "why, yes, of course! You left five thousand in an open account with us—of course, of course!"

He pushed a bell button and gave a few words of instruction to a lady secretary. "Just ask them," he said, "to send a memorandum."

In a few minutes the lady secretary returned, and gave a paper to the broker with a few words in a low voice.

"Well, well," said the millionaire, "is that all Mr. Jares, this is very interesting. We lost that five thousand—it seems. That's the way things go, you know. It's lost—very interesting. Well, well,—I must not keep you. Drop in some time when you're in New York again."

Jares left without his money,—he had seen what they could do with it.

A Partition of Russia

By DR. H. L. STEWART
Professor of Philosophy, Dalhousie University, and Editor of Dalhousie Review.

A PASSAGE in Colonel Beck's address to the Polish legislature may well be the significant explanation of Russia's obviously more negotiable attitude to Anglo-French diplomats.

It is the passage of cryptic suggestiveness about a German lure to Warsaw. "Certain proposals were made," said Colonel Beck, "going much farther than the subject under consideration." What sort of proposals? In Paris they have been quick to cross the t's and dot the i's of that statement.

The wiseacres there speak as if they themselves had been present at the interview. They were not, and naturally they have no information from anyone who was. But there is nothing in the German record to make one doubt, and there is much to make one adopt, the Paris conjecture. The reported proposal is just of the sort that Teutonic method might present.

It is not a union of Poland and Germany against Russia? Why not a repetition, at Russia's expense, of what was done in the eighteenth century at Poland's expense? The spoils would, as on the previous occasion, be divided. "Germany would take Ukraine and the Caucasus, giving Poland "White Russia" and territory along the Black Sea." It is fair to suppose that Colonel Beck feels no manner of security regarding what would be left to Poland, once a joint scheme of this character had been successfully carried out. A wise old adage reminds us, "He who will lie for you will also lie to you." Partnership in a project of pillage do well to be suspicious of each other.

But how does the proposal look from the point of view of Russia?

At Moscow they know well how deep is Poland's distrust of any kind of Russian, Tsarist or Bolshevist. They fully appreciate the reluctance of Poles to trust to any pledge from that ancient foe. In quarters usually well nformed on the intricacies of European diplomacy it was argued of late that Colonel Beck and his friends in Warsaw would even submit to Hitler in preference to accepting rescue by "the Bolshies." But what was argued "of late" often looks foolish in the light of quick development, and the willingness of the Beck circle for any kind of help which promises to be effective has grown with the growing peril. So too a change may be seen at Moscow, and in Moscow's ambassador in London.

Fortunately for both parties, whose share in danger is indisputable, however visionary may be their share of coming benefit, there are the mediating diplomatists of Paris and London who may reconcile them, at least for the present, to each other. How often it has happened in private life that disputants have thus owed their very salvation to some outside friend? To someone with the intelligence to see and the resolution to point out how each is risking his own deepest interest in an obstinate suspiciousness of the other? If Mr. Chamberlain or M. Daladier or both can thus arouse a Beck and a Molotov in time to a sense of the realities as well as the perils of the case, the peace of Europe may yet be saved.

* * *

In previous articles I pointed out how far we are from being sure of organs of great weight with some sections of French opinion. If I am not mistaken in the drift of an occasional article in newspapers too widely read by Englishmen, there is a spirit also there of the deplorable type we find in the French Fascist and semi-Fascist League. How much longer is French and British public opinion going to tolerate those whose advice to their country on matters which concern its very life is so plainly determined by motives with which their country's interests has nothing to do?

IDENTIFYING STAMPS

Tanganyika—Stamps of Kenya overprinted "G.E.A."

Tannou Touva (Northern Mongolia—Tuva or Touva.

Tasmania—Early types were inscribed "Van Dieman's Land."

Thrace—These must be compared with illustrations to identify.

Tibet—A set of five stamps were issued in 1913, inscribed "Tibet Postage."

Timor—Stamps of Macau overprinted "Timor" in small letters. Later issues are all inscribed.

Tonga—Tonga or Toga.

Transjordania—Definitive types are inscribed in English. Early issues were stamps of Palestine variously overprinted in Arabic, and those must be compared for identification.

Transvaal—Inscribed "Z. A. R. Republiek" or with inscription in English.

Tripolitania—Italian stamps overprinted "Tripolitania", or inscribed "Pacchi" in definite designs.

Tunis—Regency. De Tunis, or Tunisie.

Turkey—The "Toughra"—the signatures of the former Sultans—evolved from a human hand), appears with the complicated Arabic characters on earlier issues. A little study will allow of stamps of this country being readily identified.

Tuscany—Toscano.

Two Sicilies—Issues for Naples show the horse, rampant, and three human legs in the arms design. Issues for Sicily are inscribed "Sicilia". Issues for Naples usually show portrait of King Victor Emmanuel II, and currency is in Tornesi or Grana.

Ubangi—Stamps of Middle Congo overprinted "Oubangui-Chari-Tchad" or "Oubangui-Chari" with additional overprint reading "Afrique Equatoriale Francaise" is the name of an administrative district comprising several colonies. Definitive designs are inscribed Oubangui-Chari.

Uganda—First types were typewritten on thin laid paper and inscribed with the letters "U.G." or the name "Uganda". Definitive issue of 1903 was inscribed "Uganda Protectorate". Two provisionals issued in 1903, have the word "Uganda" overprinted at top of the stamps.

Ukrainia—The first issue were stamps of Russia overprinted with the trident-shaped device from the arms of the Grand Duke St. Vladimir, which was also included in some of the definite designs. The inscription, similar to "Ukrainska", should readily identify other issues which are, of course, obsolete.

Union of South Africa—Most issues are alternated in the sheet with inscriptions in English, then Afrikaans, the latter reading "Suida Afrika".

U. S. DRAFTING BIG PROGRAM OF HOME BUILDING

WASHINGTON, May 20—United States government advisers were reported authoritatively Friday to be drafting a new spending-lending program involving billions in federal funds. The program is being put in shape for submission to President Roosevelt and possible transmission to Congress.

As tentatively outlined, it would include:

Release of $1,500,000,000 of the treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and use of the money to finance a nation-wide home building program.

Establishment of new federal machinery for loans to business with emphasis on advances to small firms.

Government insurance of loans for utility construction.

Reduction of the five per cent interest rate on construction loans insured by the federal housing administration.

Government purchase of new railroad equipment and its rental to the carriers.

VETERAN BARES TATTOOED ARMS, QUEEN'S REQUEST

LONDON, May 20—Queen Mary, assuming her share of Royal functions during the absence of Their Majesties in Canada, walked over the muddy grounds to view exhibits at the Chelsea Flower show, and admired a disabled soldier's tattooing.

When Queen Mary insisted on making a complete tour of the flower show despite a heavy rain, officials appointed two "Sir Walter Raleighs" to precede her with flat planks to bridge the muddy pathways.

Visiting the disabled soldiers' exhibition with other members of the Royal Family, the Queen Mother asked A. Markham, Royal Irish Regiment veteran, to roll up his sleeves so she could better see the tatooed decorations on his arms.

The Duke of Kent attended the Royal tournament at Olympia this afternoon.

Moral Rearmament Week Is Postponed Here To Late June

Observance of Moral Rearmament Week to have been held from May 27 to June 2, has been postponed until the latter part of June it was decided by a meeting of prominent business men in the Corona hotel Thursday evening.

The meeting was firm in the belief that moral rearmament is the force than can stabilize Canadian life. Due to the possibility of assembly of leaders in Europe and Eastern Canada it was decided that Moral Rearmament Week will be launched next month.

Latest work of a member of the Moral Rearmament movement is the book published recently by H. W. "Penny" Austin, former member of the English Davis Cup tennis team entitled "Moral Rearmament, The Battle for Peace."

William Roberts presided at the meeting.

Sale Takes Off

Check Up

The Roundup

THE big push has started. Yesterday the seat sale for the Western-Warrington dominion championship fight here June 1 really took off and Promoter Fred Dawson pulled up and away started to whistle. Ticket orders have now been received from practically every city in western Canada—Winnipeg Saskatoon, Regina, Moose Jaw, Lethbridge Medicine Hat, Calgary and Vancouver are some of the major points from which demands have come.

Frank Heller, secretary of the Western Canada Boxing Federation, the body under whose control the fight is being staged, announced last night that representatives of the federation from all the western provinces will be present for the big show.

Tiny Osborne is busily completing contracts for his supporting card. He plans to import some talent from the United States and promises that the card will be fully worthy of the main event.

Warrington is due to arrive here May 29 to complete his training. He has already been working out at Stillman's gym in New York for nearly three weeks with a lot of top-notch fighters and will be tapering off when he gets here. Weasel is timing his training program so that his toughest workouts are next week. It is expected that a big party of stag fans will visit Eddie's Seta Ranch during camp on Sunday, while several parties are being organized to go out during the coming week.

Gunners Meet On May 24

FOR years now the merchandise shoot of the Edmonton Gun Club has been as much part of the celebrations on May 24 as popping fire-crackers. The club announces that this year will be no exception to the rule. Seven trap events and one seven event are slated for competition, with a total of over 50 prizes amounting to $200. Shooting will start at 10 a.m. and it is expected that the Penska Gun Club will again provide an army squad to take home a good share of the booty.

The club's regular Tuesday night shoot will be held as usual, next week.

Note To All Citizens

IF ANY person should tell you that he has been imported by the Sports Booster Club as a football player or a hockey player and later left to shift for himself without that which is needed for regular meals, just give Lesley Goldsworthy, Booster business manager, a ponce call at the Booster office in the Agency Building. Goldy has heard that a couple of sharpshooters have been getting by the last couple of days by handing out the above story. There is absolutely no truth in such stories. Goldy knows everybody.

It is just another example of the sort of stuff that the Booster Club has had to contend with all along. If people would only take the trouble to check up when they hear stories of this kind they'd soon find out that the actual facts are: Of course there are some fellows who have real jobs—already in the city—and expect reasonable wages while playing football. Other players completely take. There is nothing more embarrassing to a person than to be asked to work.

Rounding Up the Shorties

LAUREL MARNEY will keep play his position this season for Saskatoon Arena. The Mac City is rounding up a promising looking club for a tussle in the coming season.

Saskatoon Arena made a profit of $10,257 last season on its operations although the hockey attendance totalled only 39,940 compared with 102,555 the season before. Madison Square Garden reports that its hockey attendance fell off eight per cent last season.

Report has that Columbia is toying with the idea of putting in a softball nine for the coming season. Just a mind of $13,000 to operate the Columbia Green Grandmas last year—and the club will seek to show a slight balance. Mint going.

Mustangs Bombers play their first football game of the 1939 season today when they will be hosts to the University of North Dakota team on a charity game. William "The Wiz" Moore of Minnesota U. will not be playing for Bombers here he has the inside matter of graduation to attend to at his Alma Mater.

Charlie Edwards of the Canadian Press at Winnipeg reports that Edmonton Eskimos are angling for Wayne Weese, another ace gridder from Minnesota University. Reports last season raised Wowie all that his nickname implies. Esk officials here have nothing to say on the report at present.

Pole Drivers May Break Record for Speedway

INDIANAPOLIS, May 20—Speed—probably record-breaking speed for the Indianapolis motor raceway—will be the order of the day at the 2½-mile brick and asphalt oval today as a score or more of hot United States drivers wheel race cars on 10-mile tests in quest of starting places in the 500-mile Memorial Day classic.

A check showed between 28 and 34 hope to be ready for today's runs. Only 33 cars can start the race May 30 and if more than that number qualify today and on succeeding days, the slower machines will be eliminated.

The best bet seemed to be that a speed of at... would be necessary to win the pole position for the race.

Floyd Roberts, of Hot Springs, Ark., is trying to become the first driver to win the Indianapolis race twice in succession. Mauri Rose, of Columbus, Ohio, Wilbur Shaw, of Huntington, Ind., veteran Ray Harroun, Lou Meyer, of Hollywood, Cal., and Ted Horn, of Corona, N.Y., are among the topnotch pilots.

The four fastest cars qualified for the first three of yesterday's trials were driven by Rose, Meyer, Shaw and Roberts. Fourth place went to Jimmy Snyder, of Los Angeles, while Wilbur Shaw, of Indianapolis, and Ted Horn, of Burbank, Cal.

Prince Rupert Wins

MONTREAL, May 20—The Canadian National Recreation Association of Prince Rupert, B.C., was announced Friday as winner of the 1939 Dominion Marksmen Senior Small Bore Rifle League rifle shooting competition, succeeding to the title won last year by Surrey Rifle Club of Moncton, N.B.

It is reported that Cuba is the first of American republics to legislate against billboards and advertising displays on public highways.

BIG WEEKEND GOLF BILLED IN EDMONTON

Provided that rain doesn't wash it out, a big weekend of golf again awaits Edmonton golfdom.

The Mantell brothers, Henry and Burns are scheduled to battle with Ted Wood and Bob Forster of Mayfair for possession of the Easton challenge bowl, the trophy which Al Mantell's have held longer than any other two golfers. The challenge match will be played at Mayfair on Sunday afternoon.

Sunday will also see Mayfair shotmakers making a final big bid to retain possession of the McMullen trophy emblematic of the inter-club match championship of Edmonton. Mayfair is pitted against Municipal and must come through with a decisive victory to overhaul a handicap of 29 to nil there. The draw appears below.

The annual President vs Vice-Presidents match is slated for the Country Club on Saturday. With interest high, this first big get-together of members promises plenty of fun.

BRUEN FAVORITE TO WIN TOURNEY

MOOSEJAW, Empress May 20—Jim Bruen, Regina golfer, is a favorite to take a leading favorite to win the Bruins amateur golf championship starting Monday, after he posted 72 strokes over the Moose Jaw course in a practice round of 3 games over par for 18 holes.

The ... Regina Wallace cup team last year, and Charles Yuill of Regina, Dr. Jack Chapman, Yuill and Bruen are playing this year.

Bruen gained more fame, and the title alongside Mantle last year, by defeating Ted Oates on the 74 Thursday and ... Friday.

Bruen's first round opponent ... Moosejaw golfer, Jack Hall, ... British Wallace cup player, in the second H. Crawley survives the first round test.

O.C. Cricket

LONDON, May 20—Middlesex took eight points from Kent in the opening match of the County Championship series here today. Middlesex scored 204 runs in its first innings and Kent 177. In the second innings Middlesex scored 227 runs for seven wickets and Kent 200 runs.

THE SCORES

Middlesex 204 for five wickets, declared (Compton 100, Robertson 50).
Kent 177 (Ames 50, Wyatt 4 for 50, Hulme 3 for 50).
Middlesex 227 for seven wickets, declared (Robertson 50, Edrich 50, Compton 50 not out).
Kent 200 for nine wickets (Ames 50, Wyatt 4 for 50, Hulme 3 for 50).

British Tennis Players Cautioned

LONDON, May 20—The official organ of the British Lawn Tennis Association today published the announcement that Lieutenant M. J. Sanders, of Mr. Jones, B. E. Wilde and Chas. Saunders for "unprofessional conduct."

The players were said to have accepted payment of expenses as tennis writers while competing in an tournament. Mai Saunders formerly lived in Calgary.

German Davis Cup Players Heckled by Bleacherites

WARSAW, Poland, May 20—Germany's Davis Cup team took a lead over Poland in the opening singles matches of their European zone match Friday, played before a crowd that showed, on the whole, good sportsmanship despite the tense feeling between the two countries.

Roderich Menzel, who ... played under Greek-Roman colors, won 7-5, 6-3, 2-6, 2-6, 6-4 over the Polish ace, Adam Baworowski, who only played for Austria although a Pole by birth. The second match was called because of carelessness with lenses. Thomas, leading German's Henrich Henkel, 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 4-6, 6-4.

The chief dramatics came from 500 bleacher fans. Although cried down by grandstand spectators, the bleacherites let their feelings get the better of them at times, to the extent of jests, personal jibes and acrimonious vibes the Germans missed a beat.

Esks Rest Over Week-end For Big Night Monday

DUE to the rain of the past few days and the unsettled weather, the Eskimos will take a rest over the week-end from their spring training football workouts until Monday night, when another full-dress practice will be held at Clarke Stadium at 6:30 o'clock.

Nearly 40 candidates for positions on the squad have been turning out nightly since the practices started last Monday but Coach Bob Fritz is anxious that even more turn out during the coming week so that a really large number of final players can be developed for next fall's campaign in the Western Canada Conference.

The coach is confident that Fran Welsh, latest acquisition to the squad from the University of Minnesota backfield, is one of tremendous assistance to the team in the early stages of the spring training. What is lacking is a term to the member to experience the interment, while Eddie Bennett, Ken Preston, Jim Gibson, Jim Fergusson is coaching the candidates for end positions. Fritz himself is handling the centre material.

EXPERTS IN POSITIONS

With this trio of experts in their various positions on hand to give instructions, no big percentage of attended players now in the game to be found not in the right of whatever position in which they are best suited.

Negotiations officials of the Sports Booster Club are going ahead with negotiations to bring a few more American stars here in order the make a real necessary positions. While unnecessary disappointed that Roose Bell, big Kansas back, refused to join the Eskimos, the League rather than have the Booster management ... disappointed ... to the ... stars of ... and hope to ... from them next week.

ANGLING FOR MORE

In addition to backfield men, the Booster management is also angling for an outstanding centre, as well as a guard and tackle.

With some new material added to the exceptionally good looking local squad, Fritz is looking forward to a successful season when next fall rolls around.

PATRICK'S SUDDEN FINISH FOOLS DIZZY

PREVIOUS to last night's big main event wrestling match, Patrick O'Dowdy wagered he would carry a greased pig down Jasper avenue in the event he lost the bout. Dandy Dizzy Davis flatly refused any part of the wager and consequently neither wrestler will play nursemaid to the slippery piggie because O'Dowdy triumphed and Davis' loss had no bearing on the wager.

But O'Dowdy can thank his lucky stars for one big lucky break near the end of the bout. This was the only golden chance offered either wrestler in those last few minutes of grappling, but O'Dowdy was indeed cunning enough to seize this opportunity.

It was a curious turn of events which so favorably befell O'Dowdy. The incident happened a few seconds after Referee Lee Magill had stunned both wrestlers out when both had their shoulders on the mat, while applying the same hold. The wrestlers were hooked up and then signalled to continue. O'Dowdy ... from his opener caught Davis unprepared, slipped him over the back of the head with a ... and then proceeded slamming the Davis body all over the mat.

SQUARED THE BOUT

Davis weathered this heavy slamming for only a minute or so and ... a last crushing blow to the mat. O'Dowdy pinned Davis' shoulders to ... all over the ring for each worst he had won one fall each.

Signalled a go-ahead at the start of the bout was the real highlight of the match. Davis gave O'Dowdy a ... weight advantage but ... escaped via the safety of the neutral zone outside the ropes.

And then Pat's nasty temperament reared to the fore and the tough and ready Patrick gave Dizzy a few nerve shudders. Davis disliked that kind of treatment however and promptly pinned Pat with a crooked head shudder.

O'Dowdy started to work more seriously on Davis' arm in the second heat and it was with an arm-breaker that O'Dowdy made Davis say "Uncle Pat." That squared the match and the remainder of the ... was ... highlighted solely by Pat's ... to take advantage.

EXPLANATION OF TODAY'S CARTOON

UNCLE SAM'S RICHEST AREA: Thirty miles from Alamosa, Colorado, lie the Sand Dunes National Monument at the foothills of the Sangre de Christo (Blood of Christ) Mountains. The gold contained in the 36 square miles of dunes is estimated to average 51 cents per ton—a total of $6,000,000,000. Because the area is a National Monument, no one is permitted to work the dunes to obtain the gold content.

"FAREWELL to SPORT" by PAUL GALLICO

Young Men of Manhattan

CHAPTER XXII

OF ALL the queer animals in the newspaper zoo, the sports-writer is the strangest of the lot. He is reporter, critic, editorial writer, special investigator, press agent, cynic and hero-worshipper all in one. He is, today, essentially honest. He has a tremendous amount of power and rarely misuses it. He has more editorial liberty and freedom from interference than any other employee on the paper with the possible exception of the columnist. Whereas the news-writer is confined rigidly to fact, a sports story is considered dull-drab, and almost worthless unless colored by the personal opinion of the writer.

There are, roughly, three classes of sports-writer: the specialist who is assigned chiefly to one sport, baseball, boxing, golf, turf, or what not, and who is able to double in other sports during the off seasons; the general sports-writer who specializes in none, but is a sort of Jack-of-all-sports; and the feature writer or columnist.

By the very nature of his work, the specialist very often becomes a poor reporter, and whenever there is any important news breaking about an athletic celebrity, the wise sports editor usually yanks the specialist off the yarn and assigns another chap, either from the news side, borrowed from the city editor, or another member of his own staff. He does this because the expert and specialist is so close to his sport and the athlete that he is always the last to get any real news leak from him; and even if he does come upon an unusual story, if it is an unfavorable one or liable to cause the hero some trouble or embarrassment, he is liable to withhold it or try to kill it because he likes the man and knows him too well.

It is not easy to break bread with a person, play golf with him, be received in his home as a friend and sometimes as a trusted adviser, and then go down to the office and write a signed story to the effect that the athlete is temporarily useless at bat or will lose a scheduled prizefight because he is suffering from the result of a prolonged party, or to report that he is upset, ill at ease, and not putting his heart into his work because he has suddenly discovered that his little wife has been chasing around with some gentleman who doesn't live by his muscles and therefore isn't tired most of the time.

Reporters are reputedly cynical and hard-boiled, but actually they are not. They are soft-hearted and frequently sentimental and their code of honor is often more rigid than might be found in many other industries, much more stern and reliable, for instance, than that of the people about whom they write. Because, no matter how friendly, an athlete will lie to a reporter or sports-writer until Ananias gets vertigo in his grave from sheer jealousy. He will give him quotes and then deny them badly the next day when he finds out they have led him into trouble. Gratitude the athlete knows not, and justice is not in his vocabulary. As long as the sports-writer is praising him, he is a sweet pal. The first line of criticism, no matter how honest or well deserved, and the writer becomes a rat and an ingrate.

TWO TYPES

But the sports-writer in the recent past has had another reason for protecting his athlete and keeping him reasonably human, decent, and heroic in the eyes of the reader. There is only a certain limited audience for the class of sports-writing that has been termed the "Oh, nuts!" variety as opposed to the "Gee whiz" type, and by far the greatest percentage of readers prefers the boost to the knock. The reader wants his too god-like heroes humbled sometimes, not being overfond of supermen, but he still wants them heroes.

The sports celebrity is the sports-writer's meal ticket. If the writer knocks him down or bends his efforts to destroying the game about which he is writing for a living, he may find himself out of a job. There is a use for boxing-writers only as long as there is regular legalized boxing and the public takes an interest in the sport.

And there you see immediately the horns of the dilemma—to be honest with, let us say, a thoroughly crooked and swindling game such as boxing, and yet not destroy it and with it the opportunity of earning a living.

The sports-writer, especially the feature writers and columnists, soon discover that they can have no friends except among their own craft and among non-athletes, if they are at all interested in their own integrity and conscience, and most of them are.

DOGS

by P. Hamilton Goodsell

OWNING DOGS

It is absurd to imagine that one can acquire a puppy, and, letting it grow up unsupervised as to manners and behavior, expect in the mature dog a paragon of deportment. Why obtain a dog unless a person is willing and able to give it the time and care and thought necessary to make it a well-behaved, decent member of the community? Far too many people own dogs, people who, although perhaps innately kind-hearted, are thoughtlessly cruel or negligent, people who, although zealous for the rights and welfare of human beings, are entirely oblivious to those of their dogs. What will remedy this state of affairs? The law tries to do so and fails miserably. There is only one thing that can be done. People must be taught the responsibilities of owning a dog.

TOY DOGS

Many people are apt to look upon the possession of toy dogs as essentially a prerogative of the weaker sex, and a man owning one, or even leading one belonging to his wife, is often ridiculed. Perhaps one reason why men in particular look with disfavor on the toy breeds is that many of them have coats of a quality and texture requiring considerable care to keep them looking as they should. This is faulty reasoning, for many a man wanting a small dog and turning up his nose at the toy breeds will go out and acquire one of the rough or wire-haired breeds, quite forgetting that in order to keep it in proper shape it must be periodically stripped and plucked, and if he does not himself understand how to do this, he must pay some professional to do it for him, whereas even with one of the long—or silky-haired top varieties, a short daily session with a brush will suffice to keep it in top condition.

One of the gamest and best of all ratters is the Yorkshire Terrier, a toy breed. Often at shows in England I have seen these tiny misters grooming and combing the long, silken coats of these dogs, highly prized by their roughneck owners for their sterling worth and boundless courage.

APPRECIATION

Writing a dog column for the papers and answering the letters which seek advice and help is much like any other job, in that it has its satisfactions as well as discouragements. Chief among the former are the letters from people who have been so thoughtful and kind as to write to thank me for such help as I have been able to give them. I should like to take this opportunity to thank them for their courtesy and to assure them of my appreciation.

Mr. Goodsell will be glad to answer letters about dogs, exclusive of those dealing with sicknesses, if you will write him at Tenacre, White Plains, New York. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Lou Nova Has Developed New Right-hand Chop

NYACK, N.Y., May 20—The sign on the road said "Missionary Institute," so you followed the arrow, because you were looking for a fight camp. As you turned into the driveway, the first thing you saw was a cage holding a 200-pound chimpanzee, which stood on its head as an invitation for you to scratch its back.

This is Lou Nova's fight camp, and its "props," which include lions and elephants and monkeys, make it the daffiest of all time. It's positively fantastic, this spot where the California kid is training for his 15-round party June 1 with Maxie Baer in Yankee Stadium.

LENDS EXPERIENCE

Just beyond the "chimp's" cage, you run into Braddock, who having once won the heavyweight title from Baer, is lending his years of experience to Nova's quest for Madcap Maxie's scalp.

"But I don't have to teach him much," explained Jim as he watched Nova taking his first outdoor workout yesterday after several days in the gym. "He knows how to whip Max 99 ways to the jack. He can outrough Baer and slab him silly with that left hand.

"The only advice I can give him is not to open a restaurant. It cost me 15 G's to find that out."

NEW IMPROVEMENT

The chief development notice as Lou snapped through four rounds with sparmates Jorge Brescia and Jimmy Smith was that he has come up with a snappy right-hand chop he never showed before. He whips it over inside, and while it isn't a sleep-producer, it's a right handy firecracker.

H. W. "BUNNY" AUSTIN

England's No. 1 Davis Cup star, who went into action in Toronto on Tuesday night. His objection, however, is not to drive an opponent off the court, but to draw the principles of moral re-armament into the consciousness of Canada. Significance of Austin's presence is the fact that he represents many British sportsmen who have been actively engaged since last September's crisis in raising a sportsmen's front in what the tennis star terms "the battle for peace." Austin's book, "Moral Re-Armament", has already sold nearly half a million copies since its appearance last winter.

Australia Pays Homage To King

These Are Scenes Incidental to Visit in Canada of King and Queen

King, Queen Dine In State at Rideau Hall With Leading Citizens

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, May 20—In the vaulted, grey-walled ball-room at Rideau Hall the King and Queen dined in state last night with leading Canadians and the representatives of foreign powers accredited to him as King of Canada.

The state dinner at Rideau Hall was one of the few genuinely exclusive functions of His Majesty's Canadian tour. None but high officers of church and state with their wives were invited to sit around the flower-banked horseshoe table.

A few spectators lingered at the lodge gate at the entrance to the spacious government house estate to watch notables arrive and depart, but there was no large crowd clamoring for Their Majesties as there were in Quebec and Montreal while the King and Queen were attending large dinners. On this occasion the banquet hall was beyond even cheering distance of the street.

FULL-LENGTH PORTRAITS

Full-length portraits of the King's parents, the late King George V and Queen Mary, looked down on the assembly from the wall behind the King and Queen and as they dined they faced a youthful portrait of the King's great-grandmother, Queen Victoria.

The guests assembled in the Chinese hall and as they were presented to Their Majesties moved into the dining room to take their places at the table until only the King and Queen with the governor-general and Lady Tweedsmuir were left. Then the four took their places at the table.

NO SPEECHES

There were no speeches because they are always taboo at state dinners. The King wore the full dress uniform of an admiral with the Order of the Garter and the Order of St. Michael and St. George. The Queen wore the ribbon of the Order of the Garter and a diamond tiara.

The menu was:

Cold Escoffe of Celery
Halibut Supreme, with Chiffon Sauce
Saddle of Baby Lamb with Mint Sauce and Jardiniere of Vegetables
Young Pullet, York Style, with Ontario Asparagus Salad
Crown of Ice Cream Imperial Petit Fours
Sweet Savory

GUESTS IN ORDER

To the right from Lady Tweedsmuir, the guests in order were: Baron Silvercruys, dean of the diplomatic Corps and minister for Belgium; the Baroness Tomii, wife of the Japanese minister; Count Robert de Dampierre, French minister; Lady Northcliffe, Lady-in-Waiting to the Queen; Hon. Daniel C. Roper, United States minister, and Mrs. Simeonova Fasmuin, sister of the Bulgarian minister.

To the left from the prime minister, the guests in order were: Countess de Dampierre, Baron Tomii, Japanese Minister; Miss Roper; Most Rev. Hildebrand Antoniutti, Apostolic delegate to Canada, and Miss Roper.

Around the two wings of the horseshoe sat members of the cabinet, Ottawa's two aged archbishops, Most Rev. J. G. Forbes, Roman Catholic, and Most Rev. J. C. Roper, Church of England, ranking officers of other United, Presbyterian and Baptist churches, Conservative Leader R. J. Manion, the speakers of both houses of parliament, high commissioner for the United Kingdom and the accredited representatives of South Africa and members of the personal staffs of the King and the Governor-General. Each married guest of the group was accompanied by his wife.

Several senior officers attending normally included on the guest list for state dinners given by the Governor-General attended a reception after the dinner. This group included consuls for foreign powers resident in Ottawa, deputy ministers and high ranking officials of the public service.

GALAXY OF FLOWERS

Solid, old-fashioned and comfortable Rideau Hall, with a galaxy of flowers for the occasion. Red tulips graced the dinner table in front of the seats occupied by Their Majesties, a bank of red, white and blue tulips was arranged. The floral decorations blended perfectly with the deep rose and gold brocade drapes and upholstery.

In other spacious rooms where the receptions were held and where the diners went for coffee and cigarettes after the meal the floral display included amarillas, petunias, pink and white hydrangeas, white geraniums, double begonias in pink, white, red and yellow.

FOREST OF LABURNUM

At the entrance to the Chinese gallery through which the Queen entered a small forest of laburnum, a popular English plant, was arranged to serve as a reminder of other scenes. Stocks of lilac and azalea with tulips and lilies decorated the sides and corners of the gallery.

In the grand collection of Chinese antiques gathered by a former Governor-General and from which the room takes its name, was added one of the treasures of the Royal Ontario Museum, Toronto. The museum loaned a rare lacquer screen with a porcelain figures inset.

Cornerstone

in his remarks in English and French and paid the sincere compliments that Her Majesty always evokes.

PROUD DAY

It was a proud day for the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Right Hon. Sir Lyman Duff. The recent extension of his term of office enabled him to be present at a ceremony which to bench and bar in Canada is epoch-making. Sir Lyman is a British Columbian in his own mind, and it has been his ambition ever since he took the load of the law in Canada to see supreme court housed in something better than an old stable, as it has been since Confederation.

The extended term will find him still in office when the building is completed, and today he beamed with good humor. His sister was with him and they both spoke in the most admiring terms of Their Majesties. The minister of justice was brief but emphatic in his comment on the Queen.

"She's a dear," he said to me, and everybody else felt the same way about it.

When the parliamentarians and other elect stood up when the Queen tapped the foundation stone with a golden trowel, the crowd behind went wild. "Sit down, sit down," they shouted, furious at being shut out of sight of the Queen. There was a forest of pasteboard periscopes in the crowd, and every vantage point was dotted with spectators.

When the Queen, after having chatted with the Prime Minister and other eminent personages, turned from them to speak to the three masons who had laid the stone, the crowd cheered again and again. It was typical of the Queen to do the right thing, and it went to the heart of the crowd when she turned from the high hats and morning coats to the men in white overalls.

Her Majesty chatted and shook hands with two of them, but the third was perched on top of the stone. He retired and climbed down the ladder behind, but the crowd cheered him on, and he came round the scaffolding where the Queen turned to him. Again the crowd cheered. The Queen had not forgotten the man who was in the background. To her there are no forgotten men. It was the Queen's show, but the King was there and followed her example in all things. He, too, chatted with the workmen and shook hands with them, and as they drove away the crowd cheered lustily, and then, as the troop lines dissolved and they went home, one phrase was on everybody's tongue: "She's a dear."

David Rockefeller, a University of Chicago student, found no money in his basket when he was asked to pay for a young game. Imagine a Rockefeller without a dime!

Totems Protected By Copyright Law

VANCOUVER, May 20.—Indians for hundreds of years have had a copyright law. It applies to their songs and designs for totem poles.

"The artist carving a totem pole must not in any way duplicate any other in the region," said Suzanne Dickie of Heriot Bay, B.C., who has studied the ancient Indian law.

"A song is made up to fit the pole but the composer after receiving his pay, has no further rights in the song. The owner of the pole is given the sole right to sing it along with members of his immediate family."

In Field Marshal's Uniform

With the King in the uniform of a British Field Marshal, and Queen Elizabeth smiling beside him, the Royal visitors are shown leaving the railway station at Ottawa in the state coach in which they made their nine-mile drive around the Capital.

Signing The Golden Book

Ottawa Scenes Show Features of Royal Visit

In the bottom picture is shown an enthusiastic Ottawa citizen who, despite the precaution of the guards, broke through the cordon of troops to hold his child up for a close-up view of the Queen.

The King Inspects Guard of Honor at Montreal

Probably most familiar of the King's many duties is that of the inspection of troops and in many Canadian communities military as well as civil welcomes await the Royal visitors. Here the King is seen as he reviewed the guard of honor drawn up at the Park avenue station immediately following the arrival of the King and Queen in Montreal. The guard of honor consisted of selected companies from the Black Watch, the Royal Regiment and the Fusiliers of Montreal. During the inspection guns boomed out a 21-gun salute.

SAFE DRIVING GETS SUPPORT FROM ROYALTY

His Majesty the King Has Aided Safety Campaigns

By A. B. MACKAY
President of the Alberta Motor Association

Motorists of this province and also pedestrians will undoubtedly join in paying high tribute to Their Majesties the King and Queen on the felicitous occasion of their visit to Alberta in the course of their tour of the Dominion of Canada.

We can mark the occasion in a most auspicious manner by increasing the endeavors of all to avoid traffic accidents.

For many years His Majesty has been engaged most actively in accident prevention activities. He has long been known as a careful, cautious driver himself, setting a fine example for all motorists to follow.

When he was Duke of York he emphasized the need of careful driving and gave expression to his views in a number of public addresses. It is recalled that on one occasion when giving an address at a banquet of one of the motor associations affiliated with the Royal Automobile Club of Scotland, he declared that "the large car must not bully and the small car must not obstruct." Here is something which if generally observed by all motorists would go a long way in making our streets and highways safer and would materially reduce the number of accidents.

As Duke of York and as King, His Majesty has over a long period been a leader of the campaign in the United Kingdom for greater safety on the highways. While he has been associated with the National Safety First Association both as president and patron, his interest has gone a great deal deeper than that.

His personal and active interest in the work has been significant, while his sympathy with the objectives of the organization have been widely recognized.

CHILD SAFETY

It is well known that he has attended conferences of the association, not only in London but elsewhere. His Majesty also is particularly interested in promoting "child safety."

On no less than two occasions he appeared in films prepared by the Safety First Association.

In view of his interest in the highway safety movement, we may feel certain that any efforts in this province to reduce the accident toll or hazards will be particularly pleasing to His Majesty.

PAY TRIBUTE

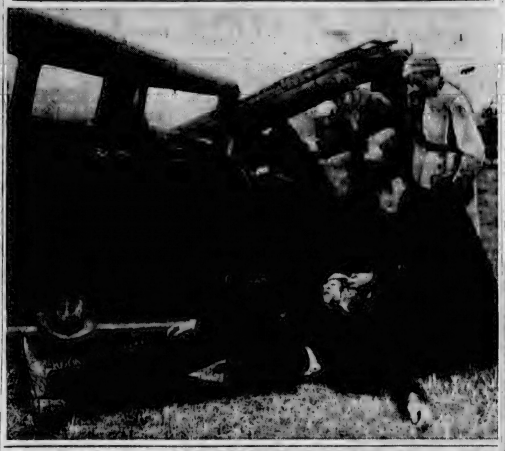
In my belief the people of this province cannot pay a more acceptable tribute than a combined effort to ensure greater safety on the highways.

Undoubtedly the visit of the King and Queen will result in tremendous traffic congestion on the streets and highways. It would be deplorable if this congestion should result in serious accidents, leaving anyone with sorrowful instead of happy memories of the royal visit.

Motorists should use extreme care in driving during this period. Not only at traffic intersections but at railway crossings, due to the numerous special trains which will be in operation, there is an imperative call to motorists to co-operate in the interests of traffic safety.

Let us make the royal visit a happy, memorable event, marked particularly by few if any accidents, and fresh impetus will be given to the safe driving movement in this province.

"Will You Be Next?"



POULTRY SOLVES INDIAN PROBLEM

REGINA, May 20.—Indian women have started to raise poultry and may, in the opinion of Thomas Robertson, inspector of Indian agencies, solve the problem of excess dogs on reservations.

Indian conventions are gathering for large numbers of nondescript dogs.

The practice of poultry raising has never been general on the reserves, but now Indian women's organizations are encouraging it and it will mean war on dogs.

"The Indian women's war plans for 1939 are that chickens killed off by the dogs," said Inspector Robertson.

Reports from 91 states during March, 1939 estimate 335,000 more passenger cars were registered. This is a 16.1% per cent. increase over February, 1939.

The 187 presses in the U.S. government printing office produce approximately 4,000,000,000 impressions annually.

England imports and consumes sufficient butter from New Zealand to provide livelihoods for 70,000 families in that dominion.

Soloist

VERNON A. GOODWIN

talented young Edmonton soloist who won high honors at both the Edmonton and Calgary festivals held recently. A student at Queen's Alexandra school, Vernon has been studying music for four years. He is a pupil of David W. Vaughan. Vernon won first place medal honors in the boys over 13 years soprano solo at both festivals. He has been competing in festivals for the past three years and was second last year.

VICTORIA HIGH SCHOOL TAKES FAIR AWARDS

Led by a sparkling array of entries by James Spalding Vocational High School organized main booths in the 16th annual Boys' and Girls' fair recently held at the YMCA and YWCA buildings. Victoria students were awarded the Junior Chamber of Commerce trophy for the school obtaining the greatest number of points.

The Boys' and Girls' beautiful first aggregate trophy was won by James Spalding, while the second aggregate award went to Florence Redding with third place honors probably being taken by John Pike, fair officials announced Friday night. Because of the large number of entries Fair officials are still checking the entries for the third aggregate winners.

Victoria students competed a grand total of 240 points to easily capture the second aggregate award. Technical School scored 160 to 124 points and Strathcona Composite was third with 108 points.

And on another section of the Boys and Girls' Fair, the Victoria fairy, And along with the number, the winners of various awards were be-witch-ing fair that the 1939 Boys and Girls' Fair was the largest and most successful yet staged in Edmonton. Attendance and entry records were topped easily in the fair, while the financial report is expected to better that of last year.

The Edmonton fair is the second largest fair in Canada and is managed and directed the annual by boasting men and women.

Junior Authors' Club

Dear Juniors:

My! But it is grand to see this corner in the paper again. And the way the mail bag is bulging with letters this week has chased all the frowns away from your editor's wrinkled brow.

I certainly hope that every member of this club remembered their Mother on Mother's Day last Sunday. But what would be even nicer would be for every single member of the Junior Authors' Club to resolve right here and now to be just a wee bit nicer to their mothers every day in the year so that Mother would think that 1939 was Mothers' Year.

So the first time we go out let's tell mother where we are going so she won't be worried about us and it really would make mother happy if we would dry the dishes sometimes after supper without being asked.

One of the most faithful members of this corner is back again this week with a lovely poem describing the beauties of nature. The author is Nina Joy Cooke of 7201 85 street in Edmonton and the poem is one of her finest contributions. Nina would like to receive letters from other members of the club and promises to answer every one she receives. So Juniors here is your opportunity to get to know each other. Don't forget to get a letter off to Nina tonight.

BEAUTY

I stood upon a hill today
And viewed the world below.
I heard the elfin bugles play
And felt the west wind blow.

I saw a thousand daffodils
Flaunting in the breeze,
Toward the weeping willow sob
And heard the busy bees.

I saw the silver ribbon of
A river far below,
And I viewed the mountains' splendour,
With their crests of shining snow.

And when I wandered down again
To walks so tall, and stiff,
Crowned with the sunset's glory
The Beauty of the hill.

—By NINA JOY COOKE.

A very well done poem Nina. You have given an exceptionally clear picture of the scene which is always the first essential of good writing and at the same time one of the most difficult things to do. We will all be looking forward to other poems from you.

Josephine Ewasiuk, of Chipman, has also turned poem of interest which should make her a veteran, and a new member. So Juniors, up on your toes and give a hearty word of greeting to our new member, Olga Ewasiuk, of Chipman, whom Josephine's sister.

SNOWBALL

A fluffy ball of white,
A soft and pink cheek,
Eyes with a green an light,
Soft panded tone
Of darkness has made sure.
As everyone knows,
With a nibble for his supper tonight.
Off Snowball goes.

By JOSEPHINE EWASIUK.

A BUTTERCUP

Green as spring grass
Bright as new gold.

The kind of a flower
Only nature can mould.

A symbol of love;
A giver of pleasure;
Only a buttercup.
But a priceless treasure

By OLGA EWASIUK.

Those are two very lovely little poems, don't you think, Juniors? Both are very descriptive and "catchy". They make you want to read them over a second time.

We will have your button and card out to you in a few days, Olga, and also a button to your sister. I'm terribly sorry about your button, Josephine. I can't imagine what could have become of it, but there will be another along in a few days.

Mabel Schultz, a great worker in the club from Spruce Grove, has turned song-writer. Mabel's song is about a lonesome cowboy that I'm sure you will all like. It is too bad that we can't hear Mabel singing the song, for I'm sure it would be simply fine.

A COWBOY

I'm just a lonesome cowboy
On a lonesome trail,
All night I sit and watch my cattle
And hear the coyotes wail

I haven't got a sweetheart,
And fortune I have none;
I've got a big and swell guitar
And, o' course, a rusty gun.

Now soon, there'll be a roundup,
I'll be looking there for you.
So meet again next Saturday,
Yo-dee-o-le-i-hoo.

—By MABEL SCHULTZ

Incidentally, Mabel supplies the information that a yodel is supposed to be inserted in the fourth verse and the song to gargle your throats well and then let loose with one that will put Wilf Carter to shame. Thank you, Mabel for your song. I hope that it will encourage other members to try the same thing too.

Goodness! but that mail bag is beginning to look pretty slim now. Winding up the Corner this week is another poem by Dale Smith of Wetaskiwin. Dale has written a cute little poem about a bad puppy that always wants to fight.

BAD PUP

I know a little puppy who isn't very bright,
The reason that I know it is 'cause he likes to fight
You see him running down the street,
And hear the patter of his feet

And when he sees another pup
He stops, growls and sidles up
To him, and shows his teeth.
First thing you know he's underneath.

The other dogs on top of him
Tearing him limb from limb
He yells and hollers, cries and begs
Then runs, his tail between his legs

Well now Juniors, that is the kind of a corner we would like to see here every week. The more letters that are sent in, the more interesting we can make the club. So let's have lots of letters next week.

And don't forget to do a little extra studying these nights. Those final exams are creeping close and I'm looking forward to every member of the club passing with flying colors. You can if you really try.

Hitting The Trail

It just a few more weeks mem-bers of the Tuxis and Trail Ranger bodies will be merging camps can was released by the lake side of Sandy Beach, Lake Isabelle, Province of Alberta.

Announcements have been received by the Tuxis Council and the Trail Ranger Council that the combined Tuxis-Trail Ranger camp will be July 3rd. This will be the 25th anniversary camp and the program will be as varied and interesting as any yet presented.

Getting off to a sharp session a Saturday morning the campers on the lines will go through a day of strenuous games and outings, tempered by morning religious and devotional periods. Arriving on the evening camp fire council ring will follow with a vesper service and camp fire. Sunday will be the day of the Tuxis and Trail Ranger Work Council of Indian will supervise the Sunday School. Dr. Crawford Gray from Mr. Seaton, Ernie Nix and Bert Davidson.

A special Leader Training Course will be held amidst the cool of Spruce Lake from July 31 to August 6 open to leaders of all denominations. Instructors at the camp will be Rev. Ross K. Cameron, Beaver Lodge; Rev. H. Berkeley, Inspector of Indian Missions, Spruce Lake and A. Smith of Pembina. The people in charge of the Leader Training course are Rev. Ross K. Cameron and Rev. H. Berkeley.

Registration Secretary is Miss Isabelle Welsh, 10548 - 85 Ave., Edmonton.

Ross K. Cameron Addresses Young People's Rally

The place of the church in the world today," was the theme of an address by Rev. Ross K. Cameron, given at the Edmonton Baptist Young People's rally held in Strathcona Baptist church recently. Miss Isabelle Welsh, president of the union, was chairman of the rally.

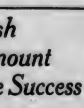
Guests included Rev. Ross K. Cameron, Rev. H. Stilborne, and Mrs. S. M. Hirtle, Rev. and Mrs. A. S. Carlson, Mr. and Mrs. Heber Smith, Mr. and Mr. Sam Walker Sorenson and Harold Campbell.

A feature of the rally was the presentation of a shield to the young people by Mrs. Heber Smith of Strathcona Baptist church. This shield is to be for annual competition among the Baptist Young People's societies and was awarded this year to Strathcona Baptist Young People's union.

First Attempt To Publish Year Book At Westmount High School Huge Success

EMBARKING on a new venture, students at Westmount High school blazed a trail that is expected to be followed for years to come as they produced their first year book, "The Westmount Review". The 84-page book is the product of weeks of strenuous work on the part of the staff of the "Pioneer," the Westmount school paper, who were instrumental in the production of the initial year book at the progressive West Edmonton school.

Keith Huff



Bert Nightingale

Under the direction of Keith Huff, editor in chief of both the Pioneer and the Review, and Bert Nightingale, whose art work is one of the features of the publication, a staff of 13 students took part in the production of the book.

The book, one of the finest high school publications in Canada, contains photographs and short sketches of the graduating class together, with interesting reviews of the activities of various clubs in the school and activities participated in during the year.

Six group photographs of the various athletic teams in the school form one section of the book. Shown are the senior, junior and bantam football teams, the senior hockey team and the senior and junior girls' basketball quintets.

CANDID SHOTS

Five masterpieces of scenic photography divide the various sections of the Review. One of the most interesting features of the publication are two pages of candid camera shots, taken around the campus and city and all showing Westmount students in their various activities from skiing in the winter to swimming in the summer.

The literary design is in red and black, the school colors, with a mottled grey background. The cover was designed and drawn by Bert Nightingale. Art work throughout the book is of an exceptionally high calibre and speaks highly of the ability and effort of Nightingale who was responsible for this phase of the work. Of particular interest are several pen-and-ink sketches of students responsible for the production of the volume which were done by the youthful artist. They show a remarkable likeness to the students they depict.

Westmount's initial venture into the publishing of a year book has been an outstanding success.

Staff of the Review was composed of Keith Huff, editor; Bert Nightingale and Phyllis Dunkley, assistant editors; Norma Reynolds and John Carmack, sports editors; Jean Corregan, feature editor; Ralph Loder, advertising manager; Willet Ritchie, humor; Arlene Pinch, Ruth McCartney, Harry Anderson, advertising; Nolan Henderson, treasurer, and Shauna Little, dramatics.

Each year the Year Book Committee chooses the students whom their opinion deserve a special award for their year's work. These pupils are called Honor Students.

From the six rooms eligible there were thirty named. From group 1: Hazel Beeson, Marguerite Christmas, Helen Gillett, Rhoda Henbest, Lena Herman, Rita Holdsworth, Marjorie Noon, Ivy Young.

From group 3: Wella Gerrie, Grace Hay, Willie Lou Louis McIntosh, Mary Nightingale. From group 4: Audrey Barber, Phyllis Docherty, Jo Goodman, Hazel Dunn, Paul Faryna, Gladys Dunwoodie, Florence Eccleston, Catherine Fowler.

From group 5: Alma Haupt, Dorothy Kay, Evelyn Matheson, and from group 6: Edith Scherr, Gertrude Schoen, Slema Ure, Elizabeth van der Lee, Queenie Wershof, Ethel Yule.

The Year Book proofs are being read, and candid cameras are busy clicking for poses to be put in a new section of the Year Book.

ST. JOSEPH
By Rene Boileau

The school play "Untrain Comes Trapping" was a grand success in all respects. Under the expert direction of L. Picard, the boys produced one of the best plays ever witnessed during the school's history.

Actors who took part in this hilarious comedy were: Joseph Lauerman, Don McGillivray, Pierre Madore, Wesley Kitchen, Joseph O'Donnell, Ronald McGillivray, John Cashman, Frank Mc-Evoy, Anthony Sylvestre, and Albert MacDonald.

Plans are being made for the "Graduation Dance" to be held on June 1st, at Sep. at promises to be one of the highlights of the Scholastic year.

TECHNICAL
By James McBride

Tech's first "Lit" was held in the auditorium of McCauley school last week. The "Lit" consisted of two plays. "A Night at an Inn" and "A Wedding". Both plays were directed and managed by students. Doris Farquharson and Susie McColman directed the plays and Elsie Coulson and Margaret Taylor took charge of the make-up. Margaret John took charge of costumes.

Tech's 90 or more Grade XII students are making their last year of high school just as enjoyable as they can. On Friday they held a hike to White Mud Creek. Next Friday they are going to hold their annual graduation banquet and dance in the Corona hotel. At the banquet Mr. W. E. Bolsum will show some moving pictures he took in the shops and in front of the school during noon hours. After the banquet is over the students will return to normal life till the exams come and then with exams behind them they will separate, some to the university, some to Normal school, and some to begin earning their own livelihood.

The Camera club held an "Enlarging Night" recently. With their home-made enlarging apparatus, students enlarged their favorite negatives.

Some time in the first week of June the final and largest number of the Tech Pinion will be issued.

VICTORIA
By Gordon Brown

Years of association at Vic will be climaxed tonight by the graduation banquet and dance of the class of 39. About 125 graduands and guests will be on hand for the occasion.

Toasts and replies to toasts are to be made by Mr. Hicks, Ralph Hollinsworth, Ken Leischeur, Grace Wilkins, Mary Nix, Bev Toby, Betty Knight, Mr. Scarborough, Bill Bartleman and Pat Follinsbee. The Grad committee deserves a rose garden for their efforts.

Wednesday, the Students' Union decided on the design of the Special Awards crest, and decided on Alex Rubin as boy recipient for Grade 10. The crest will consist of a white laurel wreath on a red back-ground with the word "V.H.S. Special Award 1938-39" in black.

STRATHCONA COMPOSITE
By Mary Barbara Mason

Climaxing the whole school year, Friday 394 graduating students from our school gathered in Knox church with their parents and friends. The idea of a formal graduation was a new one and was well received by all, as for Strathcona it was only graduation of their school life. After the Reverend Mr. Gordon Brown's talk the outstanding students in academic work and athletics were presented with their special crests done in gold, maroon and green, similar to the crest worn playing the Alberta crest with its mountains and wheat. Tea, for the graduates and their parents, as guests of the Grade XII's, was served in Acacia Hall.

ST. MARY'S
By Mary House

A review of the activities of the pupils of St. Mary's High participating in the new course of studies was presented for A. A. O'Brien, secretary of the school board and for Father Jennings and Father Holland last Wednesday afternoon when the pupils gave a display of their work and also a concert program held in the school.

The girls domestic science classes for grade nine girls gave a "dress parade" in which they were arrayed in their dresses made during the year in the school.

Three plays were presented by the school. The cast of "Aunt Abigail's Bonds" was composed of Mary Christian, Marjorie Heffernan and Betty Frost. Taking part in the play "The Golden Fan" were Jean Hoberstein, Leona Holland, Joan Stoughgate, Leona Ryan, Betty Graham, Anne Hall, Marjorie Peterson, Mildred Jerwan, Eileen Sturgess and Marjorie Dolson. Cast of "The Ghost of the Boarding School" was made up of Garth Wilkie, Alma Neilson, Edith Macdonald, Violet Dombrosh, Margaret Robertson

WESTMOUNT
By Bert Nightingale

Westmount High School students went definitely Viking Saturday as the spring dance was held at the Masonic Temple.

The evening started at nine, car after car drove up and disgorged its occupants in formal gowns and summer suits. The dance was under the patronage of Mr. and Mrs. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard and Mr. and Mrs. Taylor. Don Arnett, president of the Students' Union, and his partner, Ruth McCartney, welcomed the guests.

Every grade were present, namely Charles Dunkley, past editor of the Westmount Pioneer, and Bill Acton.

The dance was beyond a doubt the social event of the season as far as Westmount as a whole was concerned, and to the Students Union which made the event possible, we bow down in an abject "Salaam".

Scout Doings

With the atmosphere tensed in Scouting circles as last minute preparations are completed for the organization's part in the Royal Visit festivities, the seventh annual May 24th rally of the Edmonton District Boy Scouts is the only important event scheduled to take place between now and June 2nd.

The rally will be held at a site near the junction of the Black and White Mud Creeks, two and one-half miles west of the Calgary highway on the Rabbit Hill road and it is expected that between two hundred and three hundred scouts will meet in the various district competitions to be run off. These will test the teams in bridge work, junior and senior camping, junior and senior signaling, junior and senior singing, with the silver cups to be awarded the winners in each event.

The camping teams will prepare to the site of the rally on the evening of the 23rd and camp over night but the remainder of the contestants will just spend the one day. The rally will close with a camp fire and formal presentation of cups to the winners. The 24th rally committee supervising the event consists of Tom Jones, district scout commissioner, Harry Holloway, assistant commissioner for training, William Foster, district scoutmaster and Richard Weir, scoutmaster of the First Edmonton Troop.

The regular gathering of the 6th Rover Crew held in their Low Level Den was visited by several guests from the First Millet Crew last Wednesday night. Two of the Millet Rover Scouts, Slover and D. Thorne, were invested in an impressive service conducted by the 6th Crew officers. Charlie Lashbrook, a visitor from the 2nd Edmonton Troop and recently returned from the Australian Scout Jamboree gave an interesting account of his experiences.

ERNIE SMALIAN STARTS MIDGET BASEBALL LOOP

By TONY CASHMAN

This year North America celebrates Baseball's 100th anniversary. Edmonton's contribution to Abner Doubleday's great game is an organized midget ball league. It is the first midget loop to be operated in the city.

The lad who started the ball rolling is 19-year-old Ernie Smalian of 9680 - 101 avenue. He started by coaching a "pickup" team on the South Side and the boys got along so well they wanted to form a league. And so the league, for 16-year-olds and under was formed.

THREE TEAMS

At present there are three teams entered in the loop, named the Ernie's South Side Dodgers; the East End Cubs coached by Walter Lunde and the West End Cardinals under the co-managership of Joe Shandro and Laurel Harney. There is a possibility that a fourth team may come into the league, but there is nothing definite about such action as yet.

DONATES CUP

Joe Monaghan, prominent Edmonton sportsman, has donated a trophy for the winning team and the chase for this cup will get under way within the next two weeks. The league will continue until August.

The league will be run under the sponsorship of the Edmonton Junior Baseball executive who will supply the balls and umpires.

A few years ago a trophy was donated in Calgary to be played for annually and presented to the winner of the Alberta midget baseball championship. There has been no competition for the trophy from the north and so the winner in Calgary automatically annexed the trophy. Ernie is hoping that this year Edmonton's champions will have something to say about the southern city taking possession of the cup so easily.

Ferns, plants which have no flowers, make up a large part of the vegetable kingdom.

Snapshots Corner

By CAMFAN

During the parade on the day of the Royal Visit remember the pictures you make will be printed the rest of your life—make them the best you have ever taken. This means they must be in sharp focus, the camera held perfectly steady, preferably level and the exposure just right. Under-exposure is very bad the fastest film will not be the best, but rather one of the fine-grain type which will make big enlargements is to be preferred.

Clean the camera carefully to remove dust and finger prin's, especially from the lenses and from the rollers over which the film must be drawn. A few trial snaps this week-end of members of your family might be good practice to see the effect of light at different angles and for practice in developing.

If you are going to have your film developed by someone else a sample roll will be an assurance the work you get back will be satisfactory. Now is the time to practise!

PRO & CON

The miniature camera topic was opened last week. Some of the advantages of this type of camera are low-cost film, convenient camera size and weight as well as convenience of operation which gives it a big appeal. There is an absolute necessity in focus, exposure and processing if satisfactory results are to be obtained in the enlargements. For these reasons the camera is of use only in the hands of a person with some experience in the use of other cameras and the proper development of films, printing and enlarging. A beginner is better to start with a camera making a picture no smaller than vest-pocket size, or better 2¼ by 3¼ until the technique is well in hand.

CAMERA CLUBS

Word has reached us of a Camera Club way up at Port Radium, in the Mackenzie District known as the Labine Camera Club, Eldorado. Details of their activities and perhaps some samples of their work may be available for later editions of this column, we hope.

CLUB NEWS

The Edmonton Camera Club will draw up a slate of new officers at its meeting on Tuesday, May 23, with the new officers taking office on a summer vacation. The attraction of the evening will be an informal talk by Mr. Ernest Brown, one of Edmonton's earliest professional photographers, who will exhibit pictures made in the early days of Edmonton.

BEGINNER'S DEPARTMENT

Those who are attempting to make their own prints for the first time are invited to send their best efforts for examination to CAMFAN, in care of The Edmonton Bulletin. Don't forget the prizes offered for the best pictures taken at night during May. This is your chance to win two dollars which will buy a good deal of developer, fixer or printing paper as well as several rolls of film.

After sufficient printing has been done that the worker is sure of the procedure and choice of paper contrast and printing time he is ready to try developing a roll of film. This is not generally difficult but must be dealt with in detail in next week's issue. The chief difference is that work must be done in total darkness or by only a very weak red light.

The developing time is longer too, ranging from three minutes to half an hour or so, depending on the developer used. Details should be carefully studied in a booklet issued by one of the camera makers before trying to do the work, but sufficient details will be given that anyone can get results.

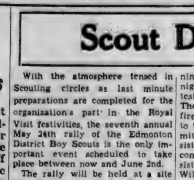
GLOSSARY OF PHOTOGRAPHIC TERMS

A lense really consists of two or more lenses which cause the direction of light striking them to be changed. The lense of a camera is made up of several of these and is really a lense-system or an "objective."

A film is a piece of glass or celluloid coated with gelatin in which silver salts have been dissolved. All films are now treated with dyes to make them take pictures by light other than blue and to prevent extra light from reflecting back from the celluloid to produce unwanted fog known as "halation."

An exposure meter is a device for gauging the strength of the light at the time a photo is to be taken. Since the desires of the photographer cannot be known to the meter it can never be foolproof.

Who's Who



THOMAS W. GORDON

The spirit of amateur photography is personified in T. W. Gordon of 12232 82 Street, a retired cabinet maker. His darkroom is a model of photographic perfection. Only personal interest will persuade him to make a picture and money cannot bury it although he gladly gives away those which he is sure will be appreciated.

TROPHIES GIVEN TO WINNERS AT NORMAL SCHOOL

By PEGGY MARTIN

A very successful dance was held on Friday in the Normal gym. This was the last dance before the Graduation dance held at the end of the month.

Now that spring has come the students are hiking at every opportunity. Members of the Debating Society held a hike along the river on Wednesday. The Dramatic club held its hike in the Riverside Park on Thursday. Both these hikes were well attended and enjoyed by the members of the societies.

At a recent meeting of the Students' Union, held in the auditorium, the cups for the best basketball team and the best Lit. program of the Spring term were awarded. The girls of Class E were again successful in winning the basketball cup. The girls were presented with flowers by their classmates. The play "Cinderella" presented by Class C was judged best of the Lit. programs. This play was well acted and staged and very much enjoyed.

400 GIRL GUIDES TO SEE PARADE

Approximately 400 Rangers, Guides and Brownies belonging to the South Edmonton Division will assemble at St. Anthony's Guide hall on June 2 before parading to the section reserved for them in the bleachers being erected for the Royal Visit. The hall is located near the corner of 84 avenue and 105 street. The reserved section of the bleachers for the Guides is situated between 106 and 106 street.

Guides and Brownies should be in full uniform and should gather a half two hours before the procession is due to start. Guides must have their name and address written on a slip of paper and fastened to their uniform. Each girl is to provide herself with a light lunch. Lemonade will be served at the hall.

On Sunday, May 21, Rangers, Guides and Brownies of the South Edmonton division will parade to several South Side churches for the morning service.

Dr. John Coburn To Address Youth

Under the joint sponsorship of the Associated Temperance Forces of Alberta, and the International Young People's Board, a meeting of all Young People of the city will be held in McDougall Church on Sunday evening, May 21, at 9:00 p.m. The speaker at the meeting will be Dr. John Coburn, of Toronto General Secretary of the Board of Evangelism and Social Service.

With The Railroaders

On the National System

More than 140 officials and employes of the C.N.R. and N.A.R. attended a banquet in the Macdonald Saturday night to honor J. T. Conyers, who retired from the post of C.N.R. superintendent after exactly 40 years of railroading. He had been assistant superintendent here since 1920.

On behalf of officials and fellow employes, H. B. Blackwood, local chairman of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, presented Mr. Cameron with a traveling bag. T. W. White, district engineer, was chairman and Assistant Superintendent Jame Clark was in charge of arrangements for the affair.

During the evening entertainment was provided by Enid, Norma, Ada and Nancy, daughters of Conductor N. L. Bruce, and Miss Barbara Langall. W. J. Argus led the community singing.

Western Canada's Wheat Crop Needs Good Spring Rains Say Experts

WINNIPEG, May 20—Needed under satisfactory conditions, Western Canada's wheat crop now requires good spring rains according to a report published by the Winnipeg Free Press yesterday.

Based on reports from correspondents throughout the prairie provinces the Free Press places the western wheat acreage at 24,611,000 acres compared with 23,100,000 in 1929, and adds:

"Only a few favored districts have received any substantial rains in April and early May and a number of the reports call a rapid fall soon within a few days if the crop is not to suffer.

"It is estimated that approximately 2,000,000 acres in Western Canada have ample moisture reserves for the time being, 17,000,000 acres are in fair condition but require rain, while 4,000,000 acres are in poor condition and need rain urgently.

Wheat seeding is practically completed in the prairie provinces except in a few points, chiefly in Saskatchewan, where heavy rains again seeding as well advanced.

In surface moisture area the report, Manitoba is best off with 11 per cent of the area good, 55 per cent fair and 34 per cent poor. Saskatchewan is 14 per cent good, 36 per cent fair and 50 per cent poor. Alberta is 14 per cent good, 43 per cent fair and 43 per cent poor.

Subsoil moisture was the best in Manitoba with 24 per cent good, compared with eight per cent in Manitoba and 19 per cent in Alberta.

Brown Cleaners and Dyers Open New, Modern Plant

New Firm Features "Perluxe" Cleaning; Modernly Equipped

Fine New Plant and Equipment Represents Utmost in Dry Cleaning, Says Mr. H. E. Brown

With an ultra-modern new building, most up-to-date new equipment, and an entirely new cleaning process, the Brown Cleaners and Dyers, Limited, have commenced business.

Proprietor of the new cleaning plant is Mr. Herschel E. Brown, who has had many years' experience in dry cleaning with the Pantorium Dye Works of Victoria, B.C., and Edmonton.

Product of the plant is the new perluxe dry cleaning. Perluxe being the trade name for Perchlorethylene, a new chemical solvent which is notable for its quick evaporating qualities, leaving no odor, and its ability to restore brightness and "handle" to garments without shrinkage or tendency to resoil quickly.

EFFICIENT, BRIGHT

The Brown building has been designed for efficiency and brightness, and every operation of the dry cleaning process is visible to the visitor to the plant from the intricate and most modern "Pant-Ex" pressing and finishing machines and the spotting equipment in the front to the elaborate cleaning and drying machinery in the rear.

The equipment, which is the newest and most modern obtainable, states Mr. Brown, with the building, represents an investment of many thousands of dollars. "We believe," he states, "that the people of Edmonton will appreciate this enterprise in bringing a new standard of high class cleaning to the city."

Manager

H. E. BROWN

Manager of Brown Cleaners, Mr. Brown has had over 30 years experience in dry cleaning.

The building itself is a bright, clean looking white stucco building especially designed to provide the utmost in light and efficiency, with a maximum of windows for lighting without sun-glare.

The elaborate equipment includes the large Perluxe cleaning machine, which is a marvel of efficiency. It not only cleans garments thoroughly in a continuous pressure bath of the Perluxe cleaning solvent, but this solvent is simultaneously being filtered by a filtering process inherent in the machine together with an extracting process.

Other machines include a large drier in which clothes are placed after the cleaning process is completed, and which performs the job in a remarkably quick time, and a new modern type Dimbler.

FAST SERVICE

All of the machinery is electrically operated and entirely automatic. The large cleaning machine is electrically controlled in all its operations by an elaborate automatic process, while the large boiler, which provides the steam and heat for the various machines and presses, is entirely electrically controlled, shutting off heat and pressure with super-human efficiency according to the automatic adjustments.

"Our aim," says Mr. Brown, "has been not only to introduce the new Perluxe cleaning, but to provide for an efficiency of production in a modern building which would provide the public with a high quality product in a minimum of time. Quick, efficient service will be one of our greatest features."

"Perluxe" Solvent Non-Inflammable, Entirely Odorless

Canadians spend over $3,000,000 a year on dry-cleaning and garment dyeing, according to the Dominion bureau of statistics. Sixty years ago dry-cleaning or "nettoyage a sec" was invented by a Frenchman, M. Jaffin. Since that time its use has increased enormously. The "dry cleaning" is a misnomer — what is implied is that the cleaning is done "without water." The dirt on soiled articles (linens, woolens, silks or cottons) cannot be removed thoroughly in any dry method. This is because the soil is mainly attached to the fibre by an oily adherent, which is insoluble in the ordinary cleaning fluid and could not be broken up or dissolved so that the dirt may be released and removed. In the laundry, soap and water break up this oil film as an emulsion and disperse the soil. Other garments of wool and silk however, cannot as a rule be treated with soap and water chiefly because they would shrink, or their color would run. Hence the value of the Frenchman's discovery, which enabled him to dissolve the oil film without damaging the fabric. This he did by immersing the garments in benzine. Naptha, benzine, gasoline and other mineral oil solvents have also been used for this purpose, some are still in use. The inflammable nature of these materials has caused restrictions on their use.

The first requirement was a non-inflammable solvent. Most of the compounds known as Chlorohydrocarbons fitted this requirement, some of them being actually used as fire extinguishers. Several of them, however, had disadvantages; some were corrosive to ordinary fabrics, while others were difficult to recover for re-use and difficult to evaporate from cleaned garments. Chemists fell on Perchlorethylene. This was found to be a remarkable dry cleaning solvent. It could be used in any building without requiring special buildings or raising the insurance rates on the premises. Garments cleaned with them were odorless and were free from chlorinous and "chemical" but complete freedom from cleaning odor also means absence of chemical smell to resoil quickly.

Perchlorethylene is sold in Canada to the dry cleaning trade under the trade name of Perluxe."

LIVESTOCK REPORT
By Senior Markets Supervisor

Report from the Edmonton stockyards for week ending May 20:

Receipts:	Cattle	Calves	Hogs	Sheep
Week	667	425	839	...
Saturday	34	53	56	...

The market remained steady with last week's close on handyweight butcher steers and heifers, but heavy export steers were from 25c to 50c per cwt. lower. Cows were somewhat firmer with good kinds selling from $4.2½ to $4.50 and odd choice higher. Bulls were steady. Tops $3.85. Fed calves steady with the odd extreme top bringing $6.75 to $7. The following are the quotations:

Good to choice fed calves $6 to $6½, good to choice steers $6 to $6½, fair to medium $5 to $5¾, common to fair $4 to $5, good to choice heifers $5½ to $6, fair to medium $5 to $5½, common to fair $4 to $5, good cows $4¼ to $4½, common to medium $3¼ to $4, canners and cutters $2¾ down, bulls $2¾ to $3.85.

Stockers and feeders steady with good demand. Better kinds selling from $4 to $4¾.

The calf market steady. Choice vealers selling from $6½ to $7, but plain and in-between kinds are being graded close and common kinds are bringing $4½ to $5.

The hog market was unsettled, declining to a low of $7¾, but strengthening again to close Friday at $8 for bacons off truck. Selects bringing a premium of 50c per cwt. and butchers discounted 50c per cwt.

Insufficient sheep to establish a market. A few good feed lot heavy lambs sold at $8, less 4 per cent. shrink.

Note: The stockyards will be closed for trading on May 24th, but receipts will be taken care of as usual.

OKALTA NO. 8 WELL AT DEPTH OF 6,793 FEET

Okalta No. 8 should be finished within the next week. The depth Friday was 6,793 feet, a distance of 143 feet in the Madison. It is situated a quarter mile southeast of Rich-Well and northeast of Royal Canadian No. 2.

Anglo Canadian No. 8, key position test southwest of Hartell, was at 161 feet on Friday. The location is one mile west of Southwest Pete No. 2. It is one mile northwest of East Crest No. 4, which was completed last week-end.

East Crest No. 4 is on test following preliminary acidization, and will likely be re-acidized.

Green Valley-Banner on the Highwood Sinclair structure southwest of Turner Valley, is at 6,931 feet.

The well of Grease Creek Petroleums in the Grease Creek field 60 miles northwest of Calgary, is at 3,085 feet with indications of changing formation.

BEEF CALF CLUB WILL HOLD SHOW AT STOCKYARDS

Show and sale by the North Edmonton Boys' and Girls' Beef Calf Club will be held at the Edmonton Stockyards at 2 p.m. Monday next, May 22, it was announced by officials Saturday.

The club has a membership of about 20 and each member will exhibit his calf. The calves will be judged by Joe Roper of Lacombe and J. W. Durno of Calgary will sell the calves by public auction after judging has been completed.

The North Edmonton Calf Club is one of the oldest in the province and its members have achieved notable success at various livestock shows in this city. The club is holding a banquet in the evening, to which members are invited.

Melvin Ash is president of the club and Archie Blackstock is secretary. This club operates under the leadership of W. G. Morris of the provincial agriculture livestock branch.

CITY NURSES, PATIENTS TO SEE ROYALTY

"As many nurses as possible will see the Royal Procession," Chairman V. A Porter of the Edmonton Hospital board, announced at the regular monthly meeting of the board in the Royal Alexandra hospital Friday.

The hospital has purchased 100 seats for the use of the staff and patients and it is the intention of Dr. A. F. Anderson, hospital superintendent that one set of nurses and patients will be placed in the reserved section to see the procession going west on Portage avenue, and in the 28 minutes intervening the first 100 persons will exchange their seats with another 100 persons, who will witness the progress cast, thus enabling 200 persons to see the parade.

Mr. Porter and Dr. Anderson were advised to get in touch with the Royal Visit Committee regarding the decoration of the hospital.

Board Of Health States Sanitary Facilities Need

City board of health on Friday voted to advise council that adequate sanitation should provide for crowds on the day of the Royal visit, especially around bleachers.

Dr. G. M. Little, city medical officer of health, was instructed to advise council that the board felt adequate provision was not being made at the present time.

Additional funds, if necessary, should be provided to build comfort stations, which need not be elaborate, the board felt.

"If there is going to be pollution of the ground we should compel the Royal Visit committee to provide proper facilities," said Dr. R. M. Shaw, chairman of the board.

Fraser Will Is In Solemn Form Court Declares

Application to have the will of the late Allan Fraser, of St. Albert declared in solemn form was approved by Mr. Justice Shepherd in the civil division of the supreme court here Friday. The will which involves the disposition of an estate valued in excess of $60,000, left most of the estate to be divided among six Roman Catholic institutions—five in Edmonton and one in St. Albert. It is being contested by nephews and nieces of the deceased man, who claim that he had received a large part of his estate in trust from his other brothers and therefore was not entitled to dispose of it by will.

Police Arrest Youth Found In Shoe Shop

Patrolling in a police car at 2:45 a.m. Saturday, Constables J. S. Mansfield and Edward McRae found the padlock missing from the front door of Kinsman's shoe repair shop at 8725 91 street.

Entering the shop, they found Charles Bright, 8810 90 street, standing behind the counter. Stating that he was the owner's son, Bright suddenly made a dash for freedom, but was caught by the policemen.

Taken to the police station, he was booked on a charge of breaking and entering, and will appear in city police court Monday.

National Youth Sunday Will Be Observed May 21

National Youth Sunday will be celebrated throughout Canada on May 21 with special meetings and rallies being planned across the Dominion. Edmonton ministers will give special sermons to the youth of today. All young people in the city are asked to make a special effort to attend church this Sunday.

Joe McKenzie and Ralph Cleven were named as delegates to the peace council at a recent meeting of the Edmonton Youth council. During the meeting a suggestion to hold a tag day at the earliest possible date to raise funds to carry on youth work was adopted. A discussion took place over the fourth Canadian youth congress convention to be held in Winnipeg from June 30 to July 3.

Interest Is Shown Montreal - Alberta Deep Test Drilling

Evidence of unusual interest from many parts of Canada is being displayed in progress made at the Montreal-Alberta deep test well at Wainwright, according to a statement made on Friday by James A. Ross and George L. Graham of this city, officials of an interested company.

This well, now sunk to a depth of more than 3,500 feet, is being drilled by L. H. Meiklejohn, of Wainwright, who recently contracted to complete the well.

Mr. Meiklejohn states that "the difficulties which heretofore held up drilling operations have been entirely overcome and steady drilling progress is being made. The results obtained so far from the drilling are satisfactory and according to expectations."

Liquor Vendors Remaining Open King's Birthday

Liquor vendors stores throughout the province are remaining open on Saturday as usual and are not closing as are other government buildings and offices in celebration of the King's birthday. The hours are the same as regular Saturdays.

No decision has yet been made regarding the hours the stores are to be open on June 2, the day of Their Majesties' visit here. It is likely that they will close at 12:30 p.m., the hour stores will close under a special bylaw passed by city council.

While no decision has been made respecting beer parlors, it is likely they will be closed from the hour the royal visitors arrive.

Farm Facilities Are Increasing Tractor Man Says

Increasing use of tractor machinery is one of the marked features of farm economy in the west, said H. H. Bloom, Toronto, Canadian sales manager of Massey-Harris Co., Ltd.

Accompanied by C. W. Sockett, supervisor of collections, Mr. Bloom arrived in Edmonton Saturday morning on an inspection trip. They will be here consulting J. A. Hilts, local manager.

John Martin, Toronto, advertising manager for the company, will be in the city on Wednesday, Mr. Bloom said, and he expects to be here till then.

Both officials are registered at the Macdonald hotel.

Sydney M. Mosley, of London, England is a guest at the Macdonald hotel.

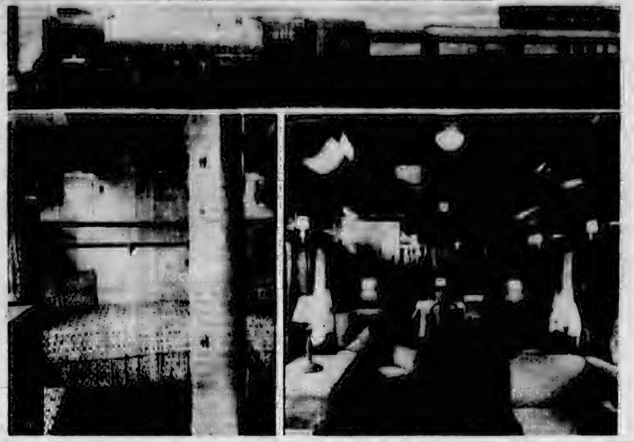
Luxuriously Equipped Train Carries Royal Visitors



The train which carries the King and Queen across Canada represents the last word in luxury. One of the engines chosen to draw the royal train, No. 2850, is pictured, top. Painted in royal blue, silver and gold, it bears the royal crest-of-arms over its headlight and on its tender. A view of one of the bedrooms in the royal suite is shown, bottom left, with a view of the private sitting room shown, bottom right. Beyond the private sitting room may be seen a glimpse of the private dining room where the King and Queen may dine alone if they desire.

Yesterday: Mary writes her first story, playing down the death of Janice French. Then she decides to return to the Dove night club but she is up against a couple of killers.

CHAPTER IX

THE dining room of the Plaza was deserted when Mary and Ladd walked in. Bus boys had not yet finished setting the tables.

"Good morning, Mr. Ladd," the headwaiter hurried forward. "It's quite all right. We have just opened the door." He smiled apologetically. "But our guests seem to follow the Continental custom of breakfasting in their rooms."

He led the way to a table overlooking Central Park.

"That man's a diplomat," commented Ladd. "He didn't bat an eye at your evening clothes."

Mary smiled. "He used to work at Zelli's in Paris. He still thinks Americans wear their evening clothes at breakfast.

"But they've usually been for a drive through the Bois. And we've come from the morgue."

Ladd studied the menu. "What about kippered herring or broiled kidneys? I think we've earned a man-sized breakfast after a night like that."

"All right. I'll break my rule." Mary smiled. "I never take anything but orange juice and black coffee, but kippered herring is a weakness."

Ladd gave their orders to the waiter, then leaned back in his chair and lit a cigarette. "I'm at peace with the world," he said lazily.

"Even if we haven't solved the mystery of Janice French and Duke Martin?"

"Yes," he paused. He didn't know why but Mary seemed exceedingly pleasant to rest his eyes upon. "That doesn't mean I won't be raising the devil in another hour over it, but right now I'd rather think of you."

Mary didn't question his remark. Instead she looked out the window. Then she turned her eyes full on him. He had never appreciated their beauty before. They were like serene, dark, cool pools.

"And I would rather talk about Janice," she said. "I can't get her out of my mind."

He liked her voice. It was rich and deep and throaty. "Talk about anything you want to," he said good-naturedly. "What do you think started Janice on her double life?"

But when he said goodby an hour later in front of her home it was with a curious sense of dissatisfaction. It did not comfort his ego that she had entirely forgotten him in the excitement of the French story. While her enthusiasm was a credit to her, it was hardly flattering in this instance. He repeated to himself that he was not in the least in love with her. No man could love a girl like that. They might be friends but never sweethearts. He was annoyed with her for making him realize this truth. Yet he could not get her out of his mind.

Instead of taking the taxi to his apartment, he dismissed it and swung toward Fifth avenue. He would walk home. He reached in his pocket for his pipe. As he puffed on it, he decided that he was suffering from nothing more than wounded vanity.

The morning air felt cool and crisp. He took a deep breath. It was going to be a lovely day. Cold perhaps, but healthy after that stormy weather. He had not walked down Fifth avenue in the morning for years. It recalled to him those first struggling days when he had come to New York a shy, eager boy, impatient for success. Women had not been indifferent to his charm then, but could he say as much today? He frowned and reviewed his past.

Born in Philadelphia, 40 years old. Unmarried. Set in his ways. Quick-tempered. Life started for him when he skipped the senior year in Harvard to enlist. Barely 19, he saw a month's fighting before the Armistice. He stayed in Paris and drifted into journalism. His first job was on the Herald. Then New York—the old World. The Sun.

He thought of the nights he'd worked till three and four in the morning as cable editor. He saw the copy desk. Heard the click of telegraph instruments and felt dog tired again as he recalled those tramps across town to the subway in the dawn, after the cables closed down. He remembered the sudden despair that had driven him to ship as a sailor on a boat bound for Syria. And he thought of the day two years later when he returned, tough, hardened and healthy, but broke, and slept in City Hall Park. The Gazette had taken him back. It gave him no satisfaction now to know that he was managing the paper. He puffed on his pipe. What had life made him—a misanthrope—a recluse?

Bitter as his thoughts were, they seemed constantly to be receding. His most vivid interest was not himself. Instead, he was still thinking of Mary Franklin. There was that vague irritation in the back of his mind. He was curious about her life. It gave him a momentary pang to realize he knew little of it.

Still thinking of her he started, as a familiar voice wished him good morning. The elevator man of his apartment house was speaking. His thoughts had carried him to his own door.

His home, a four-room apartment on Lower Fifth avenue, was pleasing but unpretentious. It had a large living room, bedroom, small study and kitchen. They contained nothing that was not essential but everything in them was right. Only the books he cared to keep were on the shelves. The furniture gave the same impression of having been selected with discrimination. The coloring of the rooms reflected his personality. In the living room, which ran the full length of the front of the apartment, the predominating tones were warm rust reds and deep browns. There was a great deal of crimson in the study and the walls of his bedroom were a light, cool, remote blue.

He flung open the front windows. The atmosphere was stuffy after the fresh air he'd just filled his lungs with. Impatiently he started toward the kitchen.

"Sam," he called.

A door at the rear of the hall opened hurriedly and a black face appeared. "Yassuh, Mr. Tom."

"I'm going to bed. I don't want to be disturbed for two hours."

A row of white teeth gleamed as a cheerful grin spread over Sam's black features. "Yassuh, Mr. Tom."

Ladd smiled in appreciation of Sam's good-humor and strolled toward his bedroom. Never, in the five years he'd had the boy, had Sam forgotten to smile. Ladd guessed that was why he kept him even when his cooking was indifferent, his cleaning sketchy and his valeting questionable. The Negro was willing enough to learn. Now if he, Tom Ladd, had a wife she would train Sam in the little things that made a servant professional.

Thoughtfully he began to undress, and then while he was still at the collar-removing stage, he reached for the telephone which connected directly with his office.

"Hello, give me the city desk. Crossie, this is Ladd. Put in a call for Fenelon at 11:30. Have the operator switch it to this wire. If we're going to get Duke Martin, our game is the offensive from now on." He paused. "I've changed my mind. I want Mary Franklin to write a follow-up story on this French case for tomorrow."

City Schools To Celebrate Empire Fete

Empire Day will be celebrated Tuesday, May 23, in city public schools, when patriotic exercises and singing will be held, it was announced Saturday by G. A. McKee, O.B.E., superintendent of schools. A full school holiday will be held May 24, Victoria Day.

In a memorandum illustrated by a portrait of the Royal Family, Supt. McKee has outlined for school pupils the significance of Empire Day, Victoria Day and the Royal Visit of June 2.

C. C. F. SPEAKER HITS MONOPOLY CANADA FINANCE

Attack upon financial and industrial monopolies that "dominate" Canada's economy was launched by Clifford E. Lee, C.C.F. candidate in the East Edmonton federal constituency, speaking in the South Side library Friday.

H. G. Moore was chairman and an organization committee was set up for polling division 30.

"The most striking characteristic of the Canadian economy," Mr. Lee said, "is that it is dominated by financial and industrial monopolies.

"In most large industries two or three corporations control 75 per cent to 95 per cent of the output. The result has been a tremendous growth of wealth in the hands of those who own the corporations and misery and want for those they exploit.

"Last year eleven thousand income receivers at the top had as large total income as four hundred thousand at the bottom," Mr. Lee charged.

Not all of the star constellations were named by the ancients. Many of them bear such modern names as Antlia (the air pump), Circinus (the compass), Microscopiim (the microscope), and Sextans (the sextant).

SOUTH ALBERTA CROP CONDITION IS SATISFACTORY

Crop conditions throughout southern Alberta are satisfactory as a result of the general rain which commenced falling Thursday evening, according to Hon. D. B. Mullen, minister of agriculture. He returned to his office on Friday after a visit to the south, in which he inspected the provincial farms at Lacombe, Olds and Brooks. He was accompanied by J. R. Sweeney, deputy minister.

"There is a wonderful feeling in the south regarding the livestock policies which we have introduced," he said. "They are working out satisfactorily to both ourselves and the farmers."

Asked regarding the crop situation, he said: "Speaking generally, the farmers are in fine shape, although there were a few areas in which rain was needed. But I understand this rain is general and should reach those areas where it is needed."

Mr. Mullen said that he had contacted several purebred horse and cattle ranchers and they expressed optimism over the price prospects.

He said that on all sides, farmers had shown a great interest in the horse vaccination campaign sponsored jointly by the three prairie governments. "The co-operation extended by farmers and others has been most satisfactory," he said.

MOISTURE TOTAL RECORD CLIMBS AS RAIN POURS

Edmonton's moisture total for the month to date was substantially boosted Friday night and Saturday morning as an additional 1.22 inches drenched the city to bring the May total up to 3.15 inches. Total precipitation for the same period last year was 1.21 inches.

As rain began falling too heavily for the soggy ground to soak it up, complaints of flooded basements began flowing in to the city engineer's department from widely scattered sections of the city. Storm sewers were heavily taxed for periods when the deluge reached near cloudburst proportions, but only a few catch basins were blocked.

Rain was general over the province, giving farmers renewed hope following the recent dry spell. Heavy rains in the south of Alberta curbed soil drifting to enable farmers in that section to resume seeding operations.

The mercury reached a peak reading of 52 above in the city Friday afternoon. Lowest reading Saturday morning was 42 above.

Official forecast for Alberta promised partly cloudy and cool weather with showers in some districts Saturday. Sunday will be fair and cool to be followed by slowly rising temperatures, it stated further.

Observers at the Alberta Motor Boat offices near the low level bridge reported that the North Saskatchewan river has risen about six inches overnight.

PROGRAM FOR SCOTS GAMES IS ANNOUNCED

Church Parade and Service At Clarke Stadium Are Highlights

Prelude to the annual Highland Games which will be held at Clarke Stadium on Wednesday, May 24, a grand parade and divine service will be held on Sunday, the parade being through city streets and the service at the legislative buildings. Three pipe bands will be in the parade.

Skirl of pipes and rhythmic swinging of tartans will feature the parade, while at the games themselves, there will be dancing competitions and other sports.

FULL REGALIA

Leading the Sunday parade will be Pipe Major Thomas Craig, in full Highland regalia. Forming up at Jasper and 100A street at 2:30 p.m. the parade, after preliminary ceremonies, will move off for the legislative buildings. The 49th Bn. pipe band will head the parade and then in the parade will be the C.N.R. and Edmonton Boys' pipe bands.

R. J. Jamieson, president of the Highland Games Association; A. J. Allinutt, and Donald Mackie, vice-presidents; Rev. George A. Macdonald, chaplain; Wallace Cove, secretary and members of the executive also will march in the parade.

Highland dancers in costume and residents in costume and athletes to participate in the games also will be in the parade.

RELIGIOUS SERVICE

Moving west on Jasper the parade will turn south on 107 street and proceed to the legislative grounds where the religious service will be held. The service will be in charge of Rev. G. A. Macdonald. The Salvation Army band will play for the service and the parade will return to its mobilization point for dispersal following the service.

Mayor John W. Fry will deliver the inaugural address at the Highland Games on Wednesday. This will be at 2 p.m. The day's program will open at 9 a.m. and will continue until 5:30 p.m. or until the program is completed.

Many entries have been received for the athletic competitions.

HIT-RUN AUTO HURTS CITIZEN POLICE REPORT

Struck by a hit-run car when he was walking in the intersection of 102 avenue and 101 street at 8:15 p.m. Friday, Michael McKuiker, 9926 106 avenue, was thrown to the pavement.

A passerby who did not give his name took the man to a nearby doctor's office, and the doctor telephoned police. On the doctor's orders, McKuiker was to be taken to hospital for examination.

The hit-run victim could give only a hazy account of the accident, but stated the man who helped him to the doctor's office said the car was a taxi.

Police investigation could disclose no one who took the number of the auto.

TELEPHONE STAFF FOR ROYAL VISIT ANNOUNCED HERE

W. J. Ragan, traffic engineer of government telephones, announced Friday that six veteran members of the city and government telephone service have been appointed to the mechanical staff here and at Jasper during the Royal Visit.

Mr. Ragan himself will be commercial representative at Jasper, and H. H. Doucette will fill the same position here.

W. Mason and C. McDonough, who have been with the service for 27 and 18 years, respectively, will be with the technical staff at Jasper, charged with seeing that the wires connecting the switchboard in the Royal train and pilot train with the Jasper toll office are working perfectly.

G. Kirkwood and Mr. Evans, who have been 26 and 19 years respectively with the service, will have similar duties here. In charge of wires in broadcasting machinery along the route of the Royal Progress are R. G. Vanderburgh and A. M. Eager, twenty-seven and nineteen years with city telephones respectively.

Dragoons Start Training

On Saturday the 19th Alberta Dragoons began training for Royal Visit Day, when a guard of honor chosen from their numbers will accompany Their Majesties on their procession through the city. Pictured above is Lieut. R. A. Cough, second-in-command of the 34 men who will form the guard of honor, seated on his horse during a practice ride Saturday morning at the Connaught armories.

INFANT DEATH IS DECREASING OFFICER SAYS

Annual Report Of City Health Board Published By Dr. Little

Infant mortality in 1938 was the lowest yet recorded for the city, it was stated by Dr. G. M. Little, city medical officer of health, in his annual report, submitted Friday to the city board of health.

"The steadily diminishing death rate of our infants is, I believe, a reflection of the increasing prenatal and post-natal supervision given mothers and infants by private physicians and our public health nurses," Dr. Little said.

PNEUMONIA

The general death rate showed no change from that of 1937, remaining at 7.9 per thousand, Dr. Little said. Deaths from heart disease and cancer showed moderate increase and there was a large increase in pneumonia deaths.

Dr. Little praised the work of the Kinsmen club nurses and the Victorian Order of Nurses.

Of 18 cases of diphtheria, Dr. Little said 12 were due to contact with people from outside points. "The incident serves to illustrate the danger to our citizens when surrounding areas are not provided with proper health supervision," he said.

VACCINATION NEGLECT

"Our citizens have neglected vaccination against smallpox until a potentially dangerous situation now maintains," he said. "We are attempting to make parents aware of the need for protecting their children against this disease."

Dr. Little said the need for low cost housing was a serious problem. "We are faced with the impossible situation of dwellings which should be condemned," he said, "but no other suitable accommodation is available to the tenants of such dwellings."

Saturnia Pyri Arrives Early Royalty Visit

One visitor certainly believes in the "come early" slogan for he flew into Edmonton Thursday and perched himself on the seventh floor of the Macdonald hotel there to await the visit of Their Majesties on June 2. All evenings of attractive Miss Jean Lacusta of the hotel failed to stir him, as he complacently sat in the early afternoon sun and enjoyed the freshness of Edmonton's altitude.

Jean decided that it was high time that such an odd creature was given the once-over by the editorial office of The Bulletin, so after some difficulty she brought him over and introduced him to the City Editor.

Getting down to serious business, the editorial staff lugged weighty tomes from the reference library and after some research the lineage of the winged beauty was determined—"Saturnia Pyri", just plain Great Peacock Butterfly to you.

Wing-span of the specimen was five inches by two inches deep. Artist Nature had painted the wings in brown, with bands of irridescent blue. His name—Great Peacock—has its origination in the tiny peacock "eyes" on the wing and similar to those on the proud peacock. The antennae were an inch in length.

FAIR DIRECTORS PLAN ERECTION FOUR NEW BARNS

Plans for the erection of four new barns at the exhibition grounds were considered Friday night at a meeting of exhibition directors at the Arena and City Architect John Martland was asked to submit his plans and specifications for the building. Manager P. W. Abbott, K.C., said Saturday.

Mr. Abbott said he did not know what type of the new buildings would be, as the fair directors would meet in a few days to review the building plans submitted by Mr. Martland.

Cost of erecting the barns, destroyed by fire last Sunday, is borne by the city and province co-operating with fair directors in having them re-built as early as possible, said Mr. Abbott.

Mr. Abbott reported that the deficit on the Spring Show this year was $2,012, as compared with a loss of $306 on the 1938 Spring Show.

Mr. Abbott said he was disappointed at the lack of response of the public to the Spring Show, and said that future policy in the entertainment at this event must be considered.

The directors adopted a suggestion that associate judges for the Summer Fair and Spring Livestock Show be chosen from brilliant agricultural students at the University.

Corner Preacher, Now Bank Robber, Remembered Here

Old-timers around Edmonton remember Oscar St. Pierre, 60-year-old farmer known in the east as "the modern Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," as a "street corner preacher" here in 1905. St. Pierre pleaded guilty Friday morning to robbing a bank of $1,190 in police court at Picton, Ont., last Wednesday. In the early days of Edmonton, St. Pierre was a well-known figure standing on the corner of 97 street and Jasper avenue where he would ask passers-by to "gather a little closer" and then unfold his religious views.

He told police that he robbed the bank because of a desire for revenge because a U.S. bank had been responsible for the financial ruin of his father. He also admitted attempting to rob another bank and of robbing a post room. He was remanded until May 31 for sentence.

During his stay in Edmonton he was a steamfitters helper and a plumbing concern. He lived in a shack below the Macdonald.

Outstanding Royal Edition Of Bulletin

Unique in every way, is the special supplement of The Edmonton Bulletin which is being prepared to mark the visit of Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, to Edmonton.

Timed for publication on the day of their arrival in Edmonton, Friday, June 2nd, The Bulletin's Royal Edition, will be distributed along with the regular issue of the newspaper, which will be made up of three sections.

A feature of the edition will be an exclusive full-page photograph of Their Majesties on front cover. The section will also contain unpublished portrait and action shots of the Royal Family purchased by The Bulletin for this particular issue.

Special writers will contribute colorful news stories covering the Royal Party's tour of Canada prior to arrival in Edmonton, many of which will be accompanied by pictures.

An outstanding "highlight" of this Edition will be the many messages of welcome to the Royal couple from the manufacturers of "Made-in-Alberta" products.

Due to the historic nature of the occasion, The Bulletin anticipates an extra heavy demand for this special issue, which will be treasured for years to come, and suggests that residents of Central and Northern Alberta, who are not regular readers of this newspaper, should arrange to reserve their copies well in advance. Address your order for extra copies to The Edmonton Bulletin, Circulation Department, Jasper Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta.

Little Orphan Annie

IN HER CAPTIVITY ANNIE HAS ONE TRUE FRIEND, BUT NOT EVEN ANNIE MAY KNOW HOW FAR THAT FRIENDSHIP HAS CARRIED DONA DOLORES, HOW MUCH SHE HAS RISKED----

IT WAS MANUEL- HE FELL FROM THE WALL HERE TWO HUNDRED FEET TO THE ROCKS BELOW, ON HIS HEAD-

CLUMSY OX-- BUT WHAT BUSINESS DID HE HAVE HERE? HM-M-AH, DONA DOLORES- IT SEEMS THERE HAS BEEN THE SLIGHT TRAGEDY-

YES?

YES- FROM THIS WALL, SO NEAR YOUR QUARTERS- PERHAPS YOU HEARD A SCUFFLE IN THE NIGHT?

A SCUFFLE? NO- I HEARD NO SCUFFLE- BUT WITH MY CHARGE SECURED, I SLEEP MOST SOUNDLY-

AH, WELL- IT IS OF LITTLE MOMENT- HE WILL NOT BE MISSED-

BUT DONA--THAT WAS MANUEL WHO WAS GOING TO TELL AXEL WE'RE FRIENDS AND GET US KILLED-

YES- HE PROMISED NOT TO TELL, IF I WOULD PAY HIM- THAT IS RIGHT-

BUT MANUEL WOULD HAVE TAKEN ALL MY MONEY, AND THEN TOLD ANYWAY, AND WE WOULD HAVE DIED--INSTEAD, MANUEL IS NO LONGER WITH US-

I KNOW- BUT I HEARD HIM COME LAST NIGHT-

I THOUGHT YOU GAVE HIM THE MONEY AND HE WENT AWAY- I DIDN'T HEAR HIM MAKE A SOUND-

NO- I KEPT MY MONEY BUT HE WENT AWAY- YES- LET US SPEAK OF IT NO MORE, LITTLE ONE-

O. K--- BUT I DO WANTA SAY I THINK YOU'RE TH' BRAVEST, TRUEST FRIEND I EVER KNEW-

THANK YOU, ANNIE- AND PLEASE, PLEASE DO NOT JUDGE ME HARSHLY---OUR LIVES ARE THE STAKES IN THIS GAME WE PLAY-

IN SUCH A GAME ONE MUST PLAY FOR KEEPS---OR THE GAME IS OVER FOREVER--- I MAY NOT SLEEP WELL, BUT AT LEAST I AWAKE-

GEE, DONA- DON'T BLAME YOU FOR ANYTHING YOU HAD TO DO IT-

WHILE A FEW MILES AWAY IN A MOUNTAIN PASS ARE THOSE WHO AXEL BELIEVES ARE STILL TEN THOUSAND MILES AWAY-

SEE THAT INDIAN LOOKOUT- THEY'VE GOT SENTRIES ALL AROUND-

WE COULD WORK IN, PICK OFF THE SENTRIES AND RUSH THE PLACE-

BUT IT WOULD BE THE SAME AS MURDERING ANNIE- NOPE- NO SENSE IN THAT, BOYS-

ONE OF US WILL HAVE TO GET INSIDE TO ANNIE IN SOME WAY-

YES- WE WILL DRAW LOTS FOR IT-

NO- THAT'S MY JOB- IT WILL TAKE SOME TIME, BUT IT'S THE ONLY WAY-

THAT SENTRY- HE WOULD BE BUT A STEP FROM THAT BUSH BEHIND HIM-

YOU'LL GET PLENTY SENTRIES LATER, MY CUT-THROAT FRIEND-

Maw Green

HA! HA! LOOK AT OLD HAWKINS DRAGGIN' THAT WHEEL-BARROW AROUND BEHIND 'IM----

WHAT'S YER LOONEY IDEA, HAWKINS? D'YUH IMAGINE YE'RE A HORSE PULLIN' A CART?

WHY DON'T YE SHOVE IT IN FRONT OF YE, SAME AS ANY SINSIBLE WAN WOULD BE DOIN'?

WY? W'Y DO HI PULL IT BEHINT ME INSTEAD O' SHOVIN' IT?

BECAUSE HI 'ATES TH' SIGHT O' TH' ORN'RY THING!

THEIR FEET ARE NOT WEBBED FROM TOE TO TOE, BUT EACH TOE CARRIES A SERIES OF INDIVIDUAL WEBS.

THE COOT'S FAVORITE HAUNTS ARE SHALLOW PONDS, WHERE REEDS AND RUSHES ARE PLENTIFUL.

IT IS A COMMON MISTAKE TO CLASSIFY THEM AS DUCKS/ ACTUALLY THEY BELONG TO THE RAIL TRIBE.

THEY ARE EXPERTS BOTH IN AND ON WATER/ THEY SWIM AND DIVE WELL... AND RUN ALONG ON THE SURFACE WHEN TAKING OFF IN FLIGHT.
